Ricky,

My lil' B.T. pic & I don't even know where to begin! Whenever I think back to all the fun times we had, in some way, you were always involved! You're also been there at some of the saddest times. I think we have a really special friendship that will last a life time! Remember when we all went to the lazarium, and when Reggy caught a fish (at Lawsted) and all the ski trips were so fun. Mex trips were the best!!! It's going to be really strange ~~the~~ not having your idiosyncratic yet sweet sense of humor to cheer me up next year, & to keep me laughing! This summer we are going to rage!!! We all have to get together and have a blast (like old times!) So let's call get together a lot on el verano and do what we do best --- party!

Take care!

Stay sweet, cutie, and now your out so have a blast! I'll miss ya next year.

Love ya tons,

KIT

Well Babe! It looks like your leaving. Well we've had a lot of fun times. I hope that you have a great summer and good luck in the future. Call me sometime and maybe we'll get together and do something. Well I'll miss you Ricky.

GOOD LUCK!

Love ya.

RICK - I don't even know where to begin - It's seems like I've known you forever! You are such a special friend! There are so many memories and experiences I'll never forget (not to mention all those hard times)! I feel so close to you, I feel like I know you so well! You were my 1st trip to Mex - my first time getting a tan! I'm anxious - Don't ever forget all our talks - I truly meant every word. You are so special & I know you are going to make it in life (lottery) & be happy! I just hope more than anything we never lose touch. You will always have a place in my heart & I'll never forget you! Believe it or not, you've really helped me a lot. Remember the 1st time we met at Malvanys & you thought I was a bitch - well, we've come a long way since then! One memory that I will always remember is how you came to me when you were down, you came to me to talk - believe me, it felt good that you had enough trust & cared enough to believe in me for help. As in the past, I will be there for you in the future. Lets rage this summer, I know I'll see you at the beach (4th July, Brighton &!! Don't forget!! I forgive you for all those times you beat me up & bruised me & tripped me - that's OK - I'll get you back someday!!

Lets go to Mex this summer
Shobster!! I'll miss seeing you every day - you are more than a best friend you my bro!!

I love you always

Seal Of Excellence

*Students Prepare.
Our future is at hand
We stand against the pressures,
So together we must band.
We now must face the world,
And the problems it does bring.
The tragedies and triumphs,
Yes, each and every thing.
But as we face our fate,
In our heart there are no fears.
We owe it all to Granite
And those special learning years.
We have a special mark,
That hangs above us all.
It's a mark of pride and excellence
That says we shall not fall.
The seal of excellence, from our school
Is so proudly worn.
It's a sign of achievement and self respect,
One that can't be torn.*

Excellence Prevails

Excellence!!! That is what this yearbook is all about. But what is excellence? By definition, it means :Very good of its kind, eminently good, first class. To the student, it means striving to reach the top, never settling for second best, and giving our all in everything we do. The yearbook is designed to show off the excellence students possess in all we do and attempt to do. The achievements of our students number in the thousands. Although not every outstanding student has his or her own page, we should recognize that all students have a mark, a seal if you will - yes, a seal of excellence.

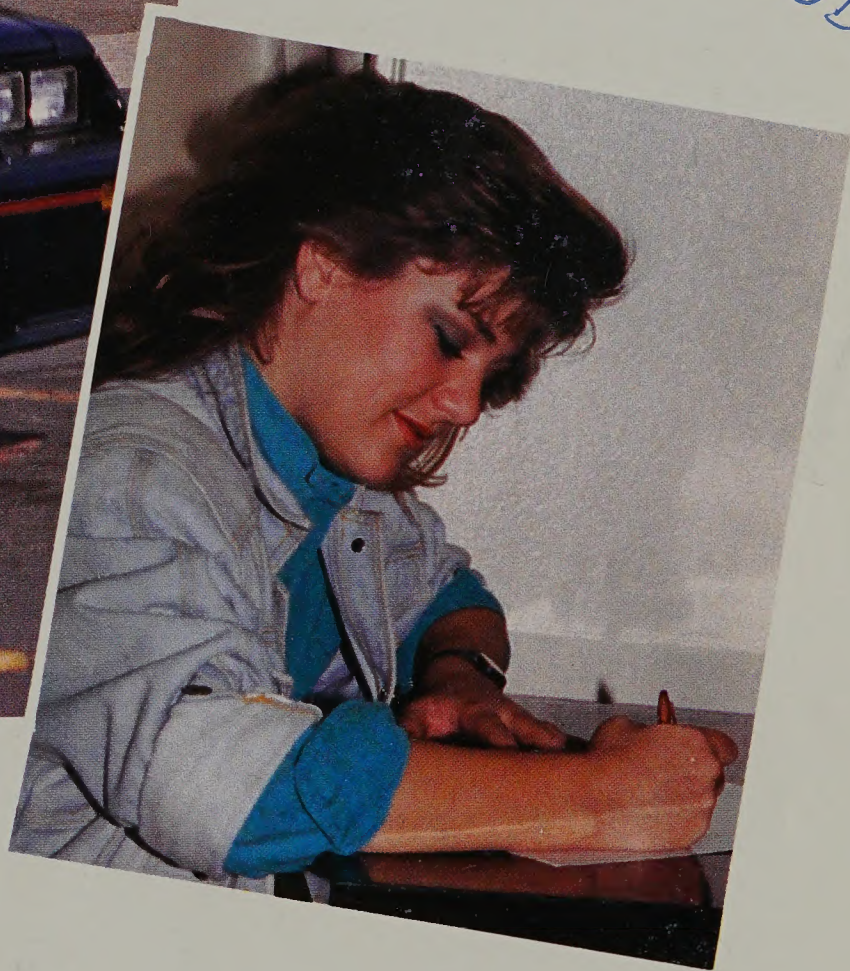

The idea of having a seal that hangs above us all may be quite appealing, but as students we must also realize the responsibilities that go along with it; the responsibility to become active and respectable citizens of our great country and learn to work with the adults rather than against them. Using the knowledge that adults achieve through many trials and errors throughout their lives is essential to perfect our own excellence. The excellence we possess is not all for work, but also for play. Students have excelled in waterskiing, surfing, moto - cross and other recreational activities as well as fixing up cars, dressing to our personalities and keeping up complex hairstyles. In all ways we, the students, show our own personal excellence. As we glance through this book and consider our futures as adults in the real world, fear not for the seal of excellence is forever with you and believe it or not, it shows.

Fred Kruse, Paula Saksa and a few friends all waterski down the Colorado. Waterskiing was always a popular sport.

Student Life

Welcome to Student Life. This section was designed especially for the students. It is about the constant search for excellence in students' lives.

The students' search for excellence began before school started. Instead of parties, movies, and just "hanging out," students used the time for learning experiences. Some students participated in Summerstock, in which many drama students spent long hours perfecting two musicals. Other students took this opportunity to go to a marine biology camp in Catalina. "Catalina Island Marine Institute (CIMI) gave me the opportunity to meet people, while learning more about marine biology," commented Holly Thomas, senior. Besides CIMI, Eagles attended cheer camp, band camp, choir camp, and yearbook camp.

When school began, the mighty Eagles continued their quest for excellence through school spirit. What? We weren't ALL mighty Eagles? Well, that soon changed on the first Friday of the school year when the upperclassmen cheered the freshmen (then turkeys) into proud, soaring Eagles. This traditional initiation activity helped to bond the students together to work as a team for everlasting school spirit. Other spirit activities that proved to be successful were Halloween dress up day, spirit week activities, and the new and improved school dances put on by "Club Granite."

The students continued their dedication to excellence throughout the school year through appearance. They took extra care in choosing their clothes, and improving the appearance of the school. To improve the school's appearance, students walked around the grass areas, they decorated their lockers, and they painted parking spaces to make school a more pleasant and fun place to go.

Not only on campus, but off campus as well, Eagles strived for excellence. Many of the students had jobs after school. They worked to gain experience in the working world, and for references on future job applications . . . not to mention for the money!

The Eagles proved their pursuit for excellence with their high goals for the future. Many planned on going to a four year university, or going to a junior college and transferring over to a university later.

Students Use Summer

To Improve

Summer is a time to relax. For some people, relaxation means eating Oreo cookies by the pool, pondering the designs on the ceiling, and (the ultimate relaxation technique) memorizing the T.V. Guide. Some people however, spent part of their summer working as guides for the Catalina Island Marine Institute. Others took off for a hike down the Grand Canyon. A couple of students were in a triathlon, and another student earned his solo pilot's license.

Kelly Glasser, Holly Thomas, and Kelly Cavins were chosen from hundreds of high school students to work as guides at the Marine Institute in Catalina. Holly said, "It was so fun that it didn't seem like work." Their duties included educating visitors about ocean plants and animals.

Those that went backpacking down the Grand Canyon included: Tavia and Trevor Crozier, Matt Dixon, Trisha Dobbs, Wendy Gunnerson, Becky and Tim Huff, Kristy Pennington, Heidi and Lara Poulson, Mike Riley, Tasha Smithey, Andy and Tim Tenney, Steve Tucker, Jocelyn Vaughn and Sallie Wade. This church youth group hiked twelve miles into the canyon and camped near Havasu Falls. In the words of Kristy Pennington, "It was hard to believe we were really there." They stayed for four days, diving off cliffs, swimming in natural pools and diving through the falls.

Jonathan Muntz and Eric Zenor participated in a triathlon on Fiesta Island, September 26. The triathlon consisted of a 10K run, a 20K bike ride, and a 2K swim. Jon and Eric prepared for the triathlon by practicing throughout the summer. Their hard work and practice paid off when Jon came in sixth in his division with a time of 2:24, and Eric came in seventh place with a time of 2:26.

Larry Morris earned his solo pilot's license at the Golden State Flying Club last summer. In addition to ground school, he spent fourteen hours in the plane. He said, "I went in thinking it was easy, but I didn't know what I was in for." The training was difficult, but he stuck to it, and earned his wings.

Jocelyn Vaughn takes in the beauty of Havasu Falls. The hikers earned many blisters and fond memories of the Grand Canyon.

Larry prepares for takeoff. He had many grueling hours of ground school before he got to fly solo.

Eric (left), and Jon are just beginning the 10K. Jon and Eric placed sixth and seventh in their division.

Holly Thomas and Kelly Cavins are ready to take a dive. They enjoyed learning about the sea and its inhabitants.

Spirit Motivates

Students

Spirit motivated students through the year; school spirit was strongly encouraged. At the spirit assembly the first week of school everyone knew how to show school spirit except for the freshmen; but they learned shortly after passing through a line of chanting football players and cheerleaders, as they transformed from turkeys to eagles.

Why, you ask, is spirit so important? A.S.B.'s Commissioner of School Spirit, Heather Garrow, comments, "Generating school spirit is important because it gets people more involved." An example of that was wearing blue on Friday to show school pride. School spirit is also shown by attending football games, dances and many other activities where students could demonstrate their excellence and dedication to our school.

Ronnie Breen, senior class president, believes, "School spirit is so important because it unites the school together as a nation and it gets students to know each other."

All in all our school spirit was excellent. Thanks to all the student body, our high school years will not be forgotten.

By Jessica Garrow

The crowd in the stands show great spirit. At the spirit week assembly, school spirit was an important and successful issue.

Varsity cheer performs a perfect pyramid. Spirit week showed much promise for our hard working cheer squad.

Every year we have a "Mighty Eagle" as part of the varsity cheer squad. Our Eagle was sophomore Janess Stone.

By Jessica Garrow

Varsity Football proudly showed school spirit during the spirit assembly. They showed spirit at many other events as well.

Showing tremendous school spirit, a new member of the administration flaps her wings. The freshmen also performed this task.

Every year a volunteered freshman has to participate in an unusual spirit activity. Shane Lynn was tricked into eating a carmel covered onion, thinking it was an apple.

During the summer, bright colors were a hit. Shorts, tank tops, and bare feet were also popular summer styles. At the beach, boys wore wild-colored bathing suits, while girls brought back the bikini trend. Florescent wetsuits, and zinca were also successful items on the market. Oshman's Sporting Goods carried these items for their tan-obsessed customers.

Fall

Miller's Outpost was a great store for fall clothes. They had a variety of colors and styles for both boys and girls. Mint green and teal seemed to stand out among the other colors on the racks as well as in the hallways. Fall clothes came in a big variety because the weather was so unpredictable, but most students found that their best bet was to wear a light sweater with their sleeves pushed up to their elbows.

Kathy Arnold and Donna Bailey stand out for their outrageous wardrobes. They thought it was fun to be "different" from their peers.

Winter

What item can be worn 365 days a year and always be in style? The denim jacket! It came in blue, black, stone washed, acid washed, bleached and other fashionable styles. The main colors for winter were black, gray, and red. Mini skirts and leather were also seen throughout the winter season. Fashion Conspiracy seemed to be a popular shop. Perhaps it was the neatly arranged windows that drew your attention to this store, but there is no doubt that it was the clothes that kept you returning.

Robert Hamilton, Scott Thatcher, and Chris Zapara show off their denim jackets. When standing in the windows with the manikins they drew a large audience.

Spring

Bright colors of peach and blue decorated the halls during spring. With different pastels, students could create their own colorful outfits. Not knowing what the weather would be like, bloused and light pants were favorites among the students. Brooks Fashions was one of the favorite spring stores.

Roger's '87 Nissan Hardbody presented an attractive, clean look without a lot of excessive customizing. He was able to afford this truck by working within a budget and getting a loan from his parents.

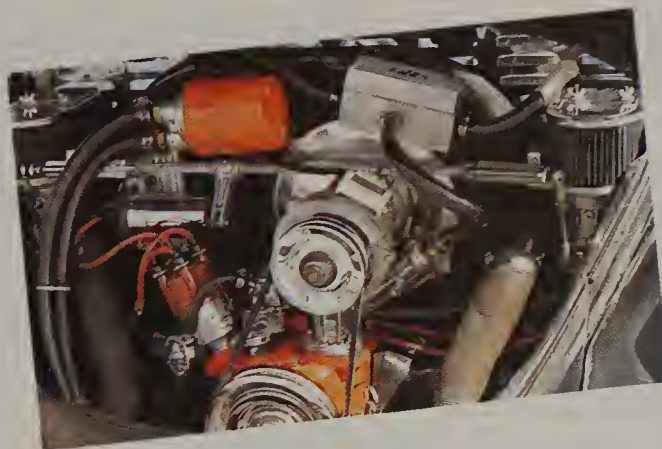

Gotti rims are one of the most expensive kinds of rims you can buy. They really dressed up Jim Peterson's Iroc-Z.

When these bugs drive by, they capture people's attention. Aaron Gaeir and Mike Jones were quite pleased about the time they spent on their bugs.

In this truck, Bryan Carter is "High and Wide." Riding in his truck seemed to make you feel like you're above everyone else.

Jim Peterson's black Iroc-Z is one of the fastest cars on campus. Somehow he still managed to be as late to class as everyone else.

Seeing Is Not Believing

At first glance, the cars on these pages appear to be money sucking motoring machines. When taking a closer look at these vehicles, one must sense that the owners are not swimming in a vast amount of wealth. In reality, these students realized that spending money on expensive brand names did not always ensure quality.

Some students had close relations with someone in the detailing business and were able to obtain more expensive products at lower prices. "My dad is in the painting business, so that made it real easy," said Aaron Gaeir. Others were able to save money by doing the labor themselves, or chalking up mom and dad for a loan. No matter how they got their cars, the time and effort spent on them exceeded those of a typical teenage car owner. It seemed that the hard work paid off for these students because of the attention they drew from jealous on-lookers.

Many trucks have painted logos on the back of their windshields. One example of this was Scott Orth's "On Ice".

You can see all the time put into this motor. Mike Jones obviously cared about more than just the outward appearance of his bug.

Lowered trucks are a common sight at Granite Hills this year, such as Scott Orth's Mitsubishi. Although these trucks looked good, they were quite uncomfortable due to a tighter suspension.

Andrea Robinson busily paints away on her piece of pavement. The creative designs and pictures kept the senior lot from being just another boring strip of asphalt.

The senior class waits patiently for the auction to begin. Seventy-five of the spaces were auctioned off at prices ranging from $120 to $260.

Seniors Need Space

"Going once, going twice, SOLD!" Another parking space is bought. As the lucky buyer fills out a $200 check, some of the more skeptical students ask themselves "WHY?" Why would anyone of sound mind wish to pay upwards of $120 for a slab of dirty, gum-covered blacktop? The reasons varied for each space owner. Some bought a space because they wanted to help contribute money for the Prom, but others were more like Cassandra Maracin, who "just wanted a place to park my car two minutes before the tardy bell rang." In all, the auction was successful, bringing in $12,700 for the Prom.

Several students bought two spaces so that they, and their friends who parked next to them, could park diagonally. After the first day of this creative parking, the administration told the students that diagonal parking was not allowed. This incident became quite an issue between the students and the administration, with the students claiming that permission for this type of parking had been given twice at the auction. The administration prevailed in the end, though, and one of the students returned both his parking spaces in protest.

Despite the problems with the spaces, most owners were satisfied to buy their asphalt and paint it. Designs such as Betty Boop, cheerleaders, psychedelic Jell-O, checks, cars, and license plates soon appeared. As Debbie Syktich put it, "Everyone got really enthusiastic." The class of '88 had done a fine job of keeping up this old tradition.

by Lara Poulson

Mr. Schimpf hits a space whose price is "flying high." He used different hats throughout the auction to keep the students entertained.

Vince Cardenez uses a handy-dandy roller to paint the edge of his space. Students found that rollers made their painting go much quicker.

This geometric "On The Edge" design is one of many creatively painted parking spaces. The students could paint anything they wanted as long as it was approved by the administration.

No, you are not seeing double! Several students successfully dressed as the administration; they even carried referrals around to tease other students.

Costumes ranging from Santa Claus to hippies mark an Eagle's creativity. After school students went to Halloween parties to show off their costumes.

Farah Kruse and Amy Saksa show off their holiday spirit as Bert and Ernie. Their original costumes turned many heads in the halls.

Matt Granada, Harley Bartlett, and Scott Zenor united to dress as Arabs. Their guns added a nice, but scary touch.

Lisa Den Herder and Tamara Tucker enjoy breakfast at Reubens before school. The senior breakfast was a hit with most of the students, however some complained that it was too short.

HALLOWEEN

Will The Real Dr. Smith Please Step Forward?

Halloween, for many students, was a nightmare! Everywhere they turned was someone from the administration staring them in the face. By lunch time the students and the teachers were borderline schizophrenic. One student came close to a heart attack when two Dr. Smiths started walking towards him loaded with referrals.

However, it really wasn't two Dr. Smiths, but one Dr. Smith and one Al Guerra dressed up as Dr. Smith. Other students dressed up as Mr.

Arens, Mr. Larivee, and Mr. Smith. Their costumes were so realistic that even the teachers were confused. Al Guerra said, "Dr. Smith loaned me her dress." Others wore beards, suits, and ties to complete their outfits. "I had to take a second look when I saw them patrolling the lunch area," commented Tasha Smithey.

Mr. Larivee also reversed roles and dressed as a student. These Halloween costumes brought about an original twist to the dress-up day.

Students gather in the quad to have fun at the carnival. The carnival was a new addition to our school spirit this year.

Mr. Schimpf and his daughter serve their time in the carnival jail. This booth was a popular attraction.

The male Eagle cheerleaders cheer on the Powder Puff team. These "boys" always add spirit at the Powder Puff games.

Mr. Larivee shows us his romantic side. The "kiss a pig" spirit activity was another new addition this year.

Carnival Creates Excitement

The week before Homecoming has always been filled with fun and excitement. During the year our A.S.B. tried something new . . .

Various clubs and sports organizations around campus participated in a carnival. Each organization created their own booth. The booths ranged from a kissing booth to a photo booth. Others included a sponge throwing booth and a "Throw Someone in Jail" booth.

"The carnival turned out to be a big success," stated Chris Badami. Many students were pleased with the outcome of the carnival. "I was really impressed. I thought it was going to be a flop," stated Charlie Geng.

All in all, the carnival was exciting. It was the perfect opportunity for both students and faculty to have fun while spending time together.

Bill Cegolka, playing the saxophone, contributes greatly in making homecoming successful. He was in charge of the homecoming events and activities.

The homecoming dance, like the other school dances, is a place to socialize. This dance, however, was even better due to a fifteen by fifteen foot screen which played music videos and showed people dancing.

Homecoming Traditions Continue

The homecoming traditions have changed significantly from the previous years. For example, more experiments with light effects helped to set a certain mood of excitement throughout the audience of parents, alumni, and students. All the stadium lights were turned off, and spotlights focused on the court of anxious princesses. Other lights raced through the audience.

The suspense and tension could be felt by all as the Queen, Ginger Smith, was announced. After being crowned, the sky exploded with color as fireworks shot into the air.

The night did not end with the fireworks, nor did the Eagles let their loss to Helix get them down. After the game, students crowded into the school gym for a dance. Here, Tim McMahon was crowned King and the students danced away. All of this was captured on a fifteen by fifteen foot screen which has never before been used for homecoming dances.

Christmas Carousel Unites

The Christmas Committee started working hard in October to create a memorable Christmas Dance. To make this possible, a group of energetic and creative people were assembled. Debbie Syktich commented, "I think the unity and closeness of everyone was a real plus." Ginger Smith said, "The size of the committee and division of the work between the members not only helped with the organization but also with the work loads."

The Christmas Dance will long be remembered. The disc jockey contracted to spin tunes never showed and the committee scrambled to find music. Taped music filled in until a replacement D.J. showed up. The crowd was great and understanding. Most students seemed to enjoy the chance to dress up, get their pictures taken and socialize with their friends.

 A Corner of My Mind
 I've tried to block your memory,
 to protect me from the pain,
 pretend I never knew you,
 and never heard your name.
 But the walls I built aren't strong enough,
 and though I fight my tears in vain,
 the feelings still come creeping through,
 and the hurt is still the same.
 I wish I could forget you,
 or make you see me now.
 I thought you really cared,
 but it seems you don't know how.
 The pain will ease in time,
 and the tears will subside.
 And though I know it's over,
 that what we had is gone,
 the memory will live forever in a corner of my mind.

Oh Freshman friends we sympathize,
 we know it's not so easy.
 We were once the scrawny whimps,
 that all considered sleazy.
 We try to be so nice,
 and welcome you to our school,
 but we often can't help laughing,
 when you try to act so cool.
 Freshman are always nerds,
 most people will have to say,
 but soon you'll grow to be Seniors,
 Oh what a glorious day.
 Then you'll laugh at freshman,
 just as we all laughed at you.
 But try to be gentle in your jokes,
 remember you were freshman too.

 No one beside me in my life.
 And then you came into my world,
 And the shades of gray became
 Blinding colors;
 And we drifted apart,
 Because of our love.
 I walked along in silence.

Tears
 If tears could talk,
 What would they say?
 They'd whisper, "I'm sorry";
 They'd cry out, "I'm hurt".
 Tears do talk, but they say too much,
 So they are hidden and wiped away.
 They are like a novel,
 a thousand wounds.
 I wish you would have read my tears.

This is Christmas time:
 The soft, rejoicing harmony of well-known Christmas songs being sung on your welcoming front porch
 The sweet, rich aroma of Grandma's warm, freshly — baked, chocolate fudge permeating through every crack and crevice of your home.
 The bright, festively-colored decorations found in every shop, home, and office window effectively spreading Christmas cheer.
 The ancient, old tradition of carefully selecting the perfect, full green pine tree to guard over your thoughtfully picked and carefully wrapped presents.
 The round, jolly elf with a long, flowing beard as white and pure as a newly fallen snow, wearing cheer at every home he visits.
 Christmas is enjoyed in the deepest part of your heart.

A feeling of love
 So easily misunderstood,
 is a feeling of love.
 A feeling of the heart,
 which is a known feeling.
 It hurts deep, yet is warm
 when felt by one.
 But when felt by two is
 the most beautiful
 feeling in the world.

True Friendship
 What is a friendship?
 It's many things.
 It is feeling completely natural with each other
 Shedding all pretense and shame,
 just being yourself.
 It is sharing with each other,
 both big and little things,
 joy and sorrow, laughter and tears.
 It is counting on each other,
 to understand your moods.
 To put up with your failings,
 to be there when needed.
 Most with a word of encouragement,
 a smile, a look.
 How do I know what friendship is?
 Because you are my friend,
 and you are all of these things.

Hidden Feelings
 They know where I go,
 they know what I do,
 they know all the stages
 that I struggle through.
 My sensitive feelings
 are hard to hide,
 that's why I keep them
 deep deep inside.
 No one will know
 quite all what I think,
 and no one will know
 quite how I feel,
 because I lock up my heart
 with a bonded seal.

Being an underclassman is not always easy. Tim Johnson finds it a difficult task just to get to his books due to having a lower locker.

Decorating lockers in birthday paper and balloons adds a special touch to a person's day. It was a friendly gesture that let the rest of the student body know who's birthday it was.

Lockers are a social place for students to meet at and talk. Many times throughout the day friends told each other to meet at their locker.

This year like never before, many lockers have been decorated and personalized. This makes the lockers more homey and creative.

Locker Mania Hits

There are over 2000 lockers on campus at Granite Hills, and they are scattered all throughout the school. Many students have followed the trend of decorating their lockers. They put wall paper inside along with pictures, posters, note pads, and locker mirrors. Students decorate friends' lockers when it is their birthday. They put birthday paper over the outside of the locker door with bows, stuffed animals, balloons and signs saying "Happy Birthday".

Many students realize that having their own locker is a privilege, and understand they belong to the school and are not to be considered private property.

Lockers are a necessity while in school. It would be difficult to lug a ton of books to every class. They are much appreciated by the student body.

Students excel in . . .

. . . art.

Mike Petersen, a junior, has taken art for three years. He has had many of his works put on display in the case next to room 91.

Mike prefers to use pen and ink or pencil when he draws. His favorite drawing subject is the beach. He gets his ideas for his pictures from magazines, and pictures of the beach that he takes himself. Mike plans to go into graphic arts or advertising in the future.

. . . woodshop.

Chad Hensley has taken woodshop since the seventh grade.

He has made many "bandsaw boxes" (a special type of box for holding things like dice or change), and has moved on to bigger projects such as a rack for holding pool table equipment. Because Chad enjoys woodshop so much, he hopes to make a career of his talents in the future.

projects such as a rack for holding pool table equipment. Because Chad enjoys woodshop so much, he hopes to make a career of his talents in the future.

. . . crafts.

With three years of crafts behind him, Roger Gower has made everything from finger rings to model cars. His favorite project to date is his scaled down workable model of his own Mitsubishi truck. Roger also likes working with clay, wood, and plaster. Most of all, though, he enjoys building things. His future plans include a career in construction, probably building houses or bridges.

... autoshop.

Excelling in autoshop is not easy. It takes a lot of know-how to rebuild and repair cars. One student, Victor Ammons, is proving his talent in this area by rebuilding a '67 Camaro. Though this is Victor's first year in autoshop, he has been interested in cars for about five years. When the Camaro is finished, he plans to keep it, then sell his present car and buy another to fix up. Victor plans to continue to rebuild and sell cars as a hobby.

... sports.

The sport of horse showing is one in which Mike Zehner is very accomplished. He has been riding since he was five years old, and for the past two years has been showing Champion horses. Mike has received one of the highest honors given to Morgan Horse Junior riders — the "Reserve Grand National and World Championship A.M.H.A. Stock Gold Medal." This year Mike advanced to the status of amateur rider. His future holds more shows, and, hopefully, more awards.

David Leavitt

Future Jeweler

Many students only dream of someday owning their own business. David Leavitt has owned his own jewelry shop since the age of fifteen. He opens it up every summer.

David is currently a junior, and at age seventeen he is doing quite well. David's interest in jewelry began at the age of seven. He began collecting beads at a crafts store.

David's interest grew and at ages ten through fifteen he sold and displayed his creations at swap meets and shows. "Some of the jewels I have worked with are diamonds from half point to five karats, and imported pearls," says David. "I also export some of my work." David's future plans are to own a chain of jewelry stores, and to be very successful.

JOBS

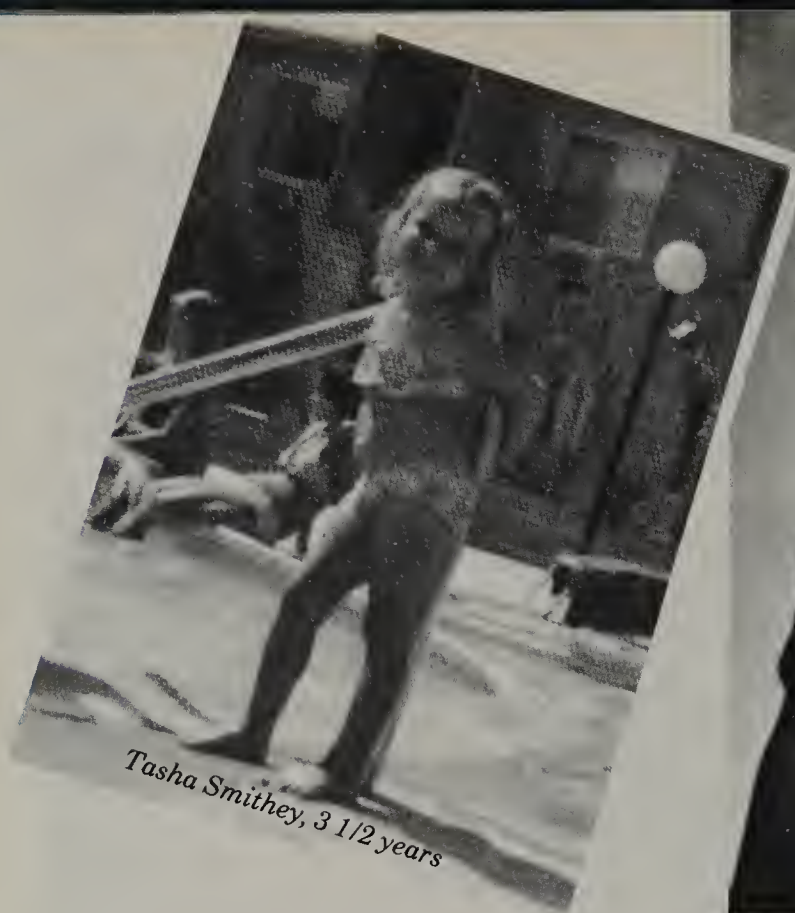

Working in an office is common for many students. Roxanne Parker received work experience credit for her job at Allan C. Hues.

Maha Gabbera is one of the many students with an after school job. She was quite eager to pose for the camera in her "Impressions" surroundings.

Wendy Ferland, known as a hard worker in both school and work, held three jobs at the same time. Working at Golds Gym with children was only one of the many jobs.

Marcie La Rochelle, the diligent worker, is shown performing her faithful duty of collecting shopping carts. She showed her skill by not hitting any cars.

Baby's A Teen-ager

All around the world, everyday, an uncontrollable change occurs. This change happens to everybody whether they want it to happen or not. Once this change happens it is impossible to change back. You can run from it, but you cannot hide! What is this uncontrollable thing that takes place? It is a transition . . . a transition from baby to teen-ager.

For some this change happens slowly. It starts with a phone call about a homework assignment. Soon the call develops into a nightly ritual. The phone begins to ring off the hook, and before you know it you are holding marathon phone calls on, yes, both phone lines . . . isn't that why Mom and Dad bought two-way calling?

Next come the phone calls from, if you can believe it, the opposite sex! Oh no! It seems like just yesterday we thought the opposite sex had "cooties." Well, we were young and foolish, then. Now we are mature, responsible teen-agers that know all the answers to life's most complex problems . . . right?

Experiencing The Excellence of Friendship

Over the years people have found that relationships and acquaintances flow in and out of their lives, but there is nothing more solid than friendship.

Friendship at Granite Hills played a big part of our lives. When you needed someone to talk to, didn't you always turn to a friend? Jenny Clark said, "When my boyfriend and I were having problems, my friend Jen was there for me." That's how it usually went; when you needed a friend there was always one there by your side.

Friends weren't only for sad times though. The happiest times were even happier when they were shared with a friend. Friends create memories that last forever when they are having a good time. Lisa Sanchez said, "Wrestling tournaments weren't the same without Becky."

Although when a friendship ended there were always some hurt feelings, one thing was not forgotten; another friend would follow to create more fun and more memories.

By Jenny Mims

Tammy Younghusband and Julie Creech are an example of a long lasting friendship. They have been friends for 7 years.

Shelly Goulart and Lynette Tominia give each other a big hug. They have been friends since they were babies.

Robby Christian and Scott Barnes try to see who is #1. They have been friends since they were 5.

Ronnie Breen, Christie Vandenberg, Todd Holverson, Al Guerra, Scott Barnes, Clara May, Joey Schulmeister, Keegan Slatten, and Troy Lynn eat lunch on our school grass. This group has been friends throughout high school.

Nowhere could I find a better friend than you,
 who brings me through happy times,
 and the fun ones too.
 A bond like ours can't get any better,
 through thick and thin we stick together.
 When we're apart, it breaks my heart,
 I'm just so bored without you.
 But when you return, I look and see,
 you were just as bored without me.
 I won't forget us,
 how could I after what we've been through.
 You put up with me
 and I put up with you.
 Anyway, before I go,
 there's somethin' you gotta know . . .
 All the memories that we've created,
 from the very start,
 are tucked away inside my heart.

Underclass

In the 87-88 school year the underclass at Granite Hills was bigger than ever. With 570 juniors, 522 sophomores and 563 freshmen, our campus seemed more crowded than in recent years.

For all the Freshmen who entered Granite Hills, their first year was quite overwhelming. Along with many changes from junior high school, freshmen faced more rigorous courses and larger classes. Many freshmen also worried about projecting the right image and making new friends along with being concerned for their mere survival!

While the Freshmen struggled, the sophomores went through a year of change and achievement. As sophomores, there was a widely felt sense of relief as the burden of being freshmen was lifted from their shoulders. Their time became even more valuable as they became involved with sports and extracurricular activities in addition to their core classes such as Biology or Driver's Education. After completing Driver's Ed, many sophomores looked forward to the day when they could drive themselves.

Meanwhile, the juniors continued their lives, making the most of their final years at Granite Hills by filling their days with school activities and spending time with their friends. Juniors played a larger part in Student Government and in sports as they had in previous years. The greatest concerns for many juniors were their grades. Raising their GPA's and getting high scores on the SAT's or ACT's for college applications seemed to worry all juniors. The juniors, as the oldest of the underclassmen, set an example for their fellow students. They overcame the problems of being freshmen and sophomores and they came out on top. All juniors looked forward to becoming Seniors and to their futures. Certainly the experiences and confidence that they have gained will help them with whatever they want to do.

All of the underclass have done their best to reach their goals and to achieve their fullest potential. Through hard work and many hours of studying, most students were satisfied with themselves and their grades. The students formed bonds of friendship that they will carry with them forever. Everywhere the Underclassmen went, they carried with them their Seal of Excellence.

JOHN TAKES A DIVE

Many guys are into football, basketball, surfing or baseball, but John Wascher enjoys something a little bit out of the ordinary; he scuba dives. Scuba diving is not just a hobby, but an activity that takes a serious commitment of time and money. It is preceded by a vigorous, six-week course which is about $200. The class consists of learning rules essential to scuba diving and later practicing and putting these rules into practice. Additional to the course's fee, $1000 is needed for the necessary equipment. Also, a great amount of time is involved. Besides taking time to attend the classes itself, it takes approximately thirty minutes to both put on and take off the wet suit and the equipment. "The course is pretty hard because there's a lot of math involved in the rules," said John, "but once you dive for the very first time, you'll know that it was worth all your time and effort."

John has been scuba diving for about a year now, and he thinks the sport is fascinating. "Under water, everything looks like a jungle," said John. He usually dives off the coast with his friends or brother. Besides just diving, he also enjoys catching lobster, abalone and spearing fish. John says, "The only regret I have is that I don't do it more often."

“CLIMB EVERY MOUNTAIN . . .”

Matt Marr, a junior at Granite Hills, has a very interesting hobby— mountain climbing. Matt has been climbing since he was seven years old when his father joined the Sierra Club and took a mountain climbing course. Ever since then, Matt and his dad have been climbing partners.

Up until a couple of years ago, his climbs were small, and mostly for practice. In recent years, however, he has accomplished such impressive climbs as Cathedral Peak, Mt. Hoffman, and Great White Book, all found in Yosemite National Park.

Matt uses special equipment such as climbing ropes, “stoppers” (wedges), “friends” (a type of clamp), and “carabeaners” (a spring-closed hook) to help him in his climb. There are several ways to get down the mountain once the peak is reached. Climbing back down, walking down the other side (if possible), and repelling are the usual ways to reach the ground. Matt enthusiastically claims that repelling is “a blast” but also that “safety comes first.” He has had a few falls, none of which were serious, though leaving him with a few scars. Matt’s future goals include climbing Mt. Ranier and Mt. Connes. He also would like to continue climbing “until I’m no longer able.” When asked why he does it, Matt replied, “It’s exhilarating. It’s a challenge just to see if you can do it.”

TERRI INSPIRES

In 1978, Terri Stephens was the National Poster Child for the deaf. At seven years old, she appeared on a commercial for American Hearing, which aired during a telethon for the deaf.

When Terri was born, she had severe hearing disorders. Her mother had a difficult time dealing with Terri, and consequently took her to Children's Hospital in San Diego. Doctors had never experienced her type of hearing problems and had trouble responding in aide to Terri. Terri is not completely deaf: her hearing problems are different from those of the two million other deaf or hearing impaired people in the United States.

Although Terri can hear some tones, she cannot hear music, which most hard-of-hearing people can generally pick-up. Terri can understand some words, but mostly she depends on reading lips and using sign language. As difficult as it is for Terri to interact with society, especially in a scholastic environment, Terri remains optimistic and cheerful.

SHEILA SHINES

Beautiful, poised, gifted. Who else could we be talking about but Sheila Waller? Sheila plays the flute, the clarinet, and the piccolo. She first developed an interest in music in the fourth grade. She says, "It looked like fun, and I thought it was interesting."

Sheila also has been dancing since the seventh grade. She has won two certificates for outstanding modern dance in the last three years. "I can express myself and show my individuality," she proudly asserted.

As if all this weren't enough, she has been graced with beauty. Sheila was entered in the Miss Enchanted Pageant in August, 1987. She came home with five trophies, "I won Best Dressed, Prettiest Hair, Eyes and Smile and first runner-up Princess. They had better watch out at the next pageant!" she explained. Sheila has very high hopes, big dreams and the determination to get all she can out of life.

HOBBY TURNS CAREER

Have you ever wondered what it would be like to dance professionally?

Well let's take a look at a person who thinks of dancing as a profession everyday.

Annette Ingrassia has been involved in tap, jazz, and hula dancing for 11 years. In the last 2 years, Annette and her 2 sisters have been fortunate enough to own their own dance studio. Annette has been teaching for 2 years and hopes to make it her profession. Annette tried out for professional parts in both a movie and Star Search Talent. Annette has received many awards in her 11 years of dancing including the Gene Nelson Award which is an award for most outstanding performance. Let's wish Annette good luck in the future and "Keep Dancing!"

THE FUTURE HOLDS GOLD

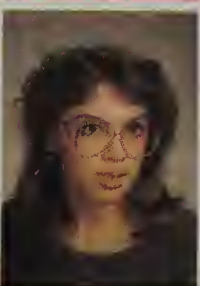

It takes a lot of dedication to practice swimming thirty hours a week during summer, twenty hours a week during the winter, and to go to swim meets on weekends instead of spending time with your friends and family. Yet this is the hard work and commitment which makes a winner and possibly an Olympic gold medalist. Carolyn Tart has been swimming professionally with Heartland Swim Association for three and a half years. Carolyn admits that compared to other swimmers at her level she has been swimming for a comparatively short time. With hard work and determination, however, she has made up for lost time. Carolyn has competed both locally and nationally. She ranks number one locally in the one hundred yard butterfly and tenth nationally. Carolyn is focusing her sights on the Junior Nationals in the winter and the Senior Nationals next year, which will finally lead to her goal—the Olympics!

You can always find a smile on Yolanda Martinez's face. The best way to relieve tension is a big smile.

Hillary Eber, intently studying in her U.S history class. Studying is always the thing to do.

Chewing on his pen helps Mike Beardslee curb his hunger pains. Lunch time is always an awaited event.

Kicking back in class is one of John Isham's favorite things to do. John also likes to play football.

As the bell rings, Heather Parker flies out in haste. Many students like to get out of class as soon as possible.

Varsity Cheerleader, Christine Paris, works hard in class to get a good grade in order to stay on the squad. All extracurricular activities require students to maintain a 2.0 average to be eligible.

Danny Tate practices the fine art of answer guessing. Resorting to this exhibits a lack of studying.

JASON TURNS COMPETITION

Jason Ferland is not just your ordinary waterskier, he has an extraordinary talent and plans to use it. "I've been waterskiing since the third grade. I really didn't think about going into it, I just liked it, so I started waterskiing", said Jason.

Now that Jason is older, he has begun to take waterskiing seriously. Jason's dad, a waterskier himself, has been helping Jason since the beginning and now plans to help him train for competition. Jason would like to start competing at Mission Bay and work his way up.

Jason's family often took trips to the Colorado River; this is where Jason got most of his practice. Waterskiing is not something you just get into. "It takes a lot of practice. You can't just get up on them and do it," said Jason. Waterskiing is expensive and takes up a lot of time, but for Jason it seems to be worth it. Good luck in competition Jason!

ADOPT GRANDPARENTS

New on campus, the "S" club raises money through fund raisers and distributes the money to needy causes. However, there are many ways to be of service to the community without donating money. An example is the "S" club Adopt-A-Grandparent program in which grandparents were chosen from the convalescent home on Madison.

Farrah Kruse, a participant of the grandparent program, stated that "most of the grandparents we adopted have lost all touch with family and relatives." Club members decided to adopt because they felt there was a need. The grandparents are enthusiastic about the program. Jolene Bowers explained that her grandparent is sewing her a stuffed elephant. Freddy Kruse was quoted as saying, "I played chess with my grandparent and now I plan on taking him to one of my basketball games." Brian Wood wants to play checkers with his grandparent while Jill Meyers intends to bake cookies. "S" Club members are pleased to be involved with Adopting-A-Grandparent and intend to continue such worthwhile projects.

KNAPPING'S A CRIME!

Jenny Student went into her class one day carrying her lovely potato baby, "Spuds." Jenny sat down in her seat to get ready for class, but remembered she had homework to turn in. She carefully tucked Spuds in and laid him down for his nap. Jenny then proceeded to the front of the class where the homework box was located. Upon returning to her seat, she realized Spuds was nowhere to be found. The thought suddenly occurred to her, "Who should I call? The principal, the police, the F.B.I., or, better yet, Rambo?" In desperation, she rushed out of the room to find the napper. Having no luck, she proceeded back to her seat, only to find a ransom note:

If you pay our ransom,
Spuds is safe and sound.
If you fail to pay,
he will never be found.
Two cookies from Grandma,
or else Spud dies.
Due by tomorrow,
or soon he'll be fries.

The adventure of Jenny Student is not an uncommon tale. Each year, the sophomore student takes on the incredible task of being a potato parent. Approximately 1 out of every 5 "Spuds" is potato napped yearly. The moral of the story: Don't be a dud, protect your Spud.

CHRISTINE BLASTS INTO THE FUTURE

Christine Montgomery, a sophomore, was able to attend the United States Space Academy at Huntsville, Alabama last summer. She first heard of the Space Academy through a magazine, and after sending in her application, she was immediately accepted. Her stay at the Academy lasted from July 24 to July 28.

Christine explained that everyday was different, and everyone at the Academy was divided into teams. The teams listened to lectures, used shuttle simulators, prepared for special planned missions, and designed a space station. Christine found the first mission the most exciting part of the five day experience because every member of the team was assigned a real job actually done by an astronaut. Christine was placed as a mission specialist who repairs the shuttle from the outside. From her experience, she learned that math and science were the most important subjects focused on.

Christine also plans on returning to Huntsville to attend the Space Academy, Level Two. Christine said, "This was a great learning experience because it helped me decide that I truly want to be an astronaut!"

THERE'S NEVER A DULL MOMENT

If you think your life is busy, just talk to Colin Rose. Most of Colin's time has been spent rehearsing his rifle routines everyday after school. The rifle team, along with the flag team here at Granite Hills, competed almost every weekend with the band. They marched in parades and field tournaments all over the San Diego and Los Angeles areas, even down Main Street in Disneyland.

Another one of Colin's main interests is Judo. A member of the Judo Association of America, Colin ranks as a yellow belt, third degree. He would love to become a black belt, the highest level obtainable in Judo.

Also, Colin enjoys hunting. He hunted mostly small game north of El Centro. He considers hunting a chance to get away from his busy schedule.

Colin decided to make the most of his high school years by getting involved and pursuing his interests. So far, Colin has a great start.

FREESTYLER HOPES TO TURN PRO

Tricia Halsema was one of our special sophomores who has a unique hobby: she enjoys riding her pink G.T. performer freestyle bike, a bike which enables her to do tricks. She learned many of her tricks not only from other freestylers, but also from constant practice. The reason her talent is so unique is that this is a sport generally dominated by boys.

Tricia began riding last summer after she saw and spoke with the freestyle riders at Sea World's "City Streets." Tricia hopes to become good enough to turn professional. This would enable her to receive thousands of dollars in free merchandise from her sponsor. This sponsorship would include riding gear, a helmet, and possibly a new bike. Sponsors also provide spending money while on tour. Going on tour also provides Tricia with the opportunity to meet other freestylers from all over the United States.

Tricia also hopes to inspire other girls getting involved in the exciting life of freestyling.

Catching each other in the halls, Terah Dagley and her friend engage in a conversation. Socializing is a necessity to get through a school day.

Taking time to drink his milk, David Eilar enjoys lunch. Lunch is every students favorite period here at Granite Hills.

Showing off their exotic styles, Jeremy Franco and Norman Brown take a look around campus. These are just a couple of trends seen around campus.

Sophomore Diamond Lopez enjoys the break after second period. This gives her time to daydream and escape the pressures of school.

Carrie Moore enjoys his day at school. Unlike many students he is happy to be here.

Getting away from the crowds in the Quad at lunch, Shawna Baum takes refuge in the little theater.

FRESHMEN

No one said being a freshmen was going to be easy. Freshmen arrive at Granite Hills with a glimmer of hope. Once the small fledglings have flapped their wings, they are remarkably transformed into fine feathered and mighty eagles. The small "turkeys" become eagles forever. Being a freshmen is hard, they are always the one to be picked on and pushed around. There are many activities and or clubs that a freshmen or upper classmen can participate in. Some clubs are: S.A.D.D., G.H.A.W., A.S.B., Marching Band, and many, many more. The 1988 year brings a new idea; in each class there is a word that helps the students feel good about themselves. Responsibility, honesty, and self-esteem were just a few. As upper classmen look back and think to themselves, being a freshmen was never easy.

JUSTIN JAMS

Justin Hocking has proved his excellence in more than just school. Besides being a top student, he is also a freestyle skateboarder. Since he started two years ago, he has competed in seven contests and has placed in the top ten in all but two. Justin skates because "it is fun and dangerous." In October, he received first place in the 2A division in a C.A.S.L. (California Amateur Skateboard League) contest at Sagus speedway in L.A. Anywhere between 20-70 people enter these contests. The age bracket is between 13-14. Justin is currently sponsored by Wet Dreams Sportswear. Justin couldn't achieve such success without the help of his father. Justin said, "My dad encourages me a lot and brings me to the contests."

CHAMPION BOWLER

Everybody has a certain hobby or activity they do in their spare time. Not all people however, make their hobbies into a future career. Mike Lankford, a freshman, was doing just that with his love for bowling. Mike's dad, Bruce, got him started on this hobby that requires skill and patience.

Mike has been bowling for eight years. He worked up to using an eleven pound ball. Practice makes perfect' and practicing two days a week and all weekend makes Mike progressively closer to being perfect.

Mike has many trophies and awards to show for his talent. He has a trophy for a 500 series, for a 200 score game, a team score of over 500, and a trophy he won at Parkway for a tournament score of over 150. His high score is 257 and his best average is 155. Mike's future goal is, "to strive to become a professional bowler," and he is well on his way.

SKIPPER SAILS

The westward wind tousles his hair as he sails through the crystal blue water. Sounds unreal? Not for Kory Smith, who enjoyed racing his seventeen foot thistle every weekend.

Kory, 14, explained that his stepfather introduced him to the art of sailing four years ago. Because of his family's support and many hours of practice, Kory is currently ranked thirty-two on the Pacific West Coast. He also holds the title of the youngest skipper on the West Coast.

"I like to sail because I get a chance to meet people and the competition is so great. I also like to be different."

Although Kory's not planning on making sailing a profession, he'd like to win the Midwinters Regatta (the biggest race in San Diego), and maybe go as far as the Olympics.

Frosh Try To Cope

Although upperclassmen pester and disturb them, Freshmen are really no different than the upperclassmen were during their first year.

Shannon Harper explained, "The halls were so crowded that I waited till almost the tardy bell before trying to find my classes.

I found out that this wasn't like grade school at all. There we had time to goof around, now grades count, so everyone is more serious," said Lora Zoll.

The kind of people I met here were different, it looked like everyone jumped out of the pages of GQ and Vogue," said Heather Jenkins.

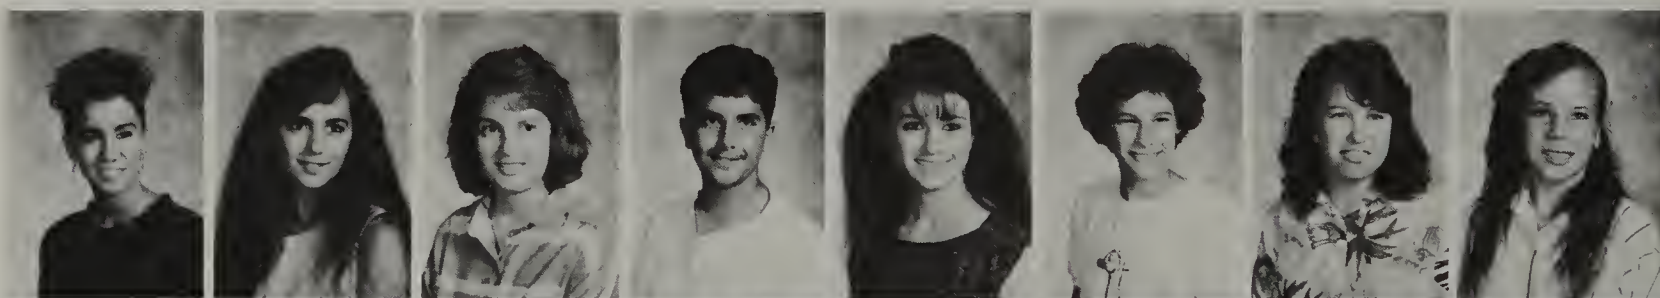

Each year the incoming freshmen display the same feeling of uncertainty about what high school is like, but they soon discover that all it takes is some getting used to.

SPLIT IN TWO

Sarah lives in a cross-cultural situation: the hearing world and the deaf world. One of the many differences between these two are the distinct languages of American Sign Language (ASL) and English. English is often a second language for deaf people, but for Sarah ASL is a new language. Hearing-impaired people depend upon vision for communication. Frustration comes with discussion groups, lack of communication, taunting from hearing people, and exaggerated mouth movements on bobbing heads when trying to speechread. Sarah hopes that ridicule, "will make way, instead, to understanding."

ARTIST WORKS

Richard Locke is legally blind. For his lessons he uses a machine called a CCTV. This enlarges his work so he can see it if he sits close enough. He is an outstanding student, getting A's and B's. He enjoys his Art class very much and draws terrific pictures. Another of his interests is the study of insects. His courage is an example to other handicapped students and an inspiration to everyone.

*Hello! Welcome to the Twenty-Eighth year of clubs. During the year, as well as the past, there were old and new clubs formed on campus. The difference among all the years was, during the 87-88 school year a variety of these clubs and organizations showed there excellence. HI*SIGN, one of the newly formed clubs on campus, worked with the hearing-impaired students in coping with the differences between the hearing-impaired and the hearing worlds. Colorguard and the Marching Band succeeded by taking first place in numerous competitions throughout the year. The Pageant showed their excellence with a new advisor and many new comers to the staff. They all worked very hard to make a great yearbook. A.S.B. put together the first annual carnival of clubs, during the week of homecoming, and it worked out as planned, "Excellent." The Varsity and J.V. Cheer squads took first place in many competitions that they attended, even the Grossmont League competition. "There were not as many clubs as previous years, but they were all more serious and dedicated," stated Larry Morris.*

Each year, more and more students become involved in our clubs and organizations on campus. This enabled each and every student to meet more people, and become more a part of our school. This was definitely one of the best years for all of the clubs, because of their pride for Granite Hills.

The clubs all had their usual new members and old members, but this seemed to pay off. With all the newcomers to the clubs, it made each club work harder to get everything accomplished which set out to do. That was one classic example of working to help give Granite Hills a "Seal of Excellence."

Another Deadline Another Miracle

Five seconds until deadline, yes Mr. Editor, my copy and layout? . . . Well, no, yeah, I'm not . . .

The previous scene was a typical line heard on a deadline day. Many students thought annual staff would be an easy class when they first applied for it. With a new advisor, Ms. Barr, and many newcomers to the staff, things were a little different. The advisor, as well as many of the students, had to be taught the techniques of making a yearbook. The staff put in many hours a day, including occasional after hours, to put together a great annual. In order to be a good "staffer," you need to have a lot of spare time. Although the staff had a new advisor, things worked pretty well. She was always willing to learn a new rule, as well as teach the class in an organized way. Ms. Barr was a very organized person, but the staff always tried to make her unorganized.

"My Editor-in-Chief and staff accepted me very willingly, and I as well as they, accepted the challenge," stated Ms. Barr. When you think of all the problems that could have occurred with a new advisor and staff, it could have gotten very hectic. This did not turn out to be a problem, it was more of an advantage. With all these new people, the Editor-in-Chief, Larry Morris, could teach them all to work as he wanted them to. Larry said, "The staff could accomplish anything because they were very intelligent and easy to work with."

Band Earns Respect

R-r-ring went the alarm at 4:30 a.m. on a cold, rainy Saturday morning. Forty-three dedicated band members sleepily rolled out of their warm beds into their showers. Questions like "Why am I doing this?" and, "Is being in band really worth getting up at 4:30 a.m.?" entered their minds, but they were too tired to think of logical answers. After their showers, and still half asleep, they hunted for their uniforms, gloves, hats, shoes, and of course, their instruments.

Before their already disoriented little minds knew what was happening, they were on a cold bus heading towards such exotic places as Savannah, Escondido, and Disneyland. Altogether the band has spent over twenty-one hours travelling on buses alone.

On those trips, the band won two first-place awards and three second-place awards; the percussion won third and fifth-place awards. However, more important than the awards, the band won respect from the student body. The A.S.B. started Band Appreciation Week and gave the band members a reception to mark the end of a successful season.

The band ends another dazzling show with "Amazing Grace" at the Band Jamboree. Most band members agreed that this was their best performance of the season.

Our Band Works Hard

The Concert Band and Wind Ensemble were two fantastic groups of musicians. Combined, they were referred to as the Symphonic Band. Under the direction of Mr. Peter Magana the students put in much hard work and planning for the pleasure of all. The Wind Ensemble included both intermediate and advanced players who were chosen by an audition.

There were ten concerts for the band this year. They included things such as the Holiday Concert, Holiday Assembly, Spring Concert, Band/Orchestra Festival, the Pops Concert, and our graduation. Since Mr. Magana has been working with the G.H.H.S. band, he has seen expanded concepts of sound, balance, and blending. Everyday he enjoyed the band's efforts and their improvements. His only major concern would be for an increase of enrollment.

To the students involved, the band was a "family." Senior Tiffany Thomas said, "The Band is a big part of this school. We contribute to the pride of G.H.H.S."

In 1987, the colorguard experienced their most successful and exciting season ever. New ideas were added to their field show, such as melodrama, dancing props, and extra equipment. A small group line was created for the song, "The Pink Panther." They received great audience response when the noble detectives (the rifle team) saved the lady in distress (the majorette) from the masked villains (the flag team). The rest of the show ranged from the energetic, fast paced "Stingray," to the soft spiritual selection, "Amazing Grace." These new concepts attracted the schools' interest, and the cheering crowds added extra motivation. Many members of the colorguard received words of support and enthusiasm from the faculty and administration. The A.S.B. organized "The Band and Colorguard Appreciation Week," which again showed the schools' appreciation of the hard work and school spirit contributed by these groups.

The colorguard practiced many long, hard hours during the summer and school year to perfect their routines. Their instructor, Kevin Sharkey, worked many additional hours, not only teaching them their equipment work, but also creating the flag work, the rifle work, the choreography, and the drill work for both the band and colorguard. On top of all this, he also designed and assembled three different types of flags for them to use in their shows. The colorguard greatly admired Kevin for his talent and true dedication. Michael Brynjestad, a member of the rifle team, said of Kevin, "I feel that we owe much of our success to him because he always motivated us to become the best. I consider him to be the backbone of the colorguard." The colorguard's time and effort paid off when they won three first place and three second place trophies at the tournaments and parades they performed in.

German Club

Socializes

The German Club 1987-88 was a social club that based all their events on the German Society. They had a Christmas party and also attended a German Folk Tale play called, "Fiddler on the Roof."

The German Club had many goals they accomplished throughout the year. They went to a German restaurant and learned a German Folk Dance taught by Mr. Stowers. The club also sold a German candy called Toberloni. President Lale Kuyumcu explained, "The purpose of our club is to learn the German language and to learn the German culture outside of the classroom."

Choir Performances Expand

Traditionally, Granite Hills Choir's performances consisted of their Holiday Concert and their "Pops" Concert. Because of only two major appearances, the opportunities for the students to entertain publicly was somewhat limited. That changed in the 1987-88 school year. In addition to these regular shows, the choirs traveled to various other places to perform. In March, the choir joined with fourteen other high schools at Point Loma College in a one thousand-voice choir. It was a great experience for many of the students. Our choir also participated in a combined concert with Grossmont College, and again, that was a huge success. Another new event that occurred was that the Honor Choir performed at Sea World, Disneyland, and other different places. It was a lot of work for them but also a lot of fun. Using determination and hard work, all the choirs reached the goal; perfection in their performances.

Roger Sigeas and Jake Vaclavek continuously played some hits for the teeny boppers. They were excellent in their work.

Rock-n-Roll with K107

So you sat outside at break and at lunch, listening to some of the best music around. Did you know that the Radio Club on campus was in charge of playing all of those great hits? The Radio Club carried their work to junior high schools for dances around El Cajon. Jake Vaclavek, a new D.J. for the station, described his first dance as "scary, but fun." Besides putting on promotions for the station, public announcements, and commercials, the Radio Club decided to do something totally different. Program Director, Wayne Jones, explained that the station worked on getting a transmitter that would allow the station, K107 Eagles, to be heard over a two mile radius in the Granite Hills area. The project would take a long time with a lot of hard work, but General Manager Jack Smith said, "We all worked together as a team to make the station the best it could be." With that kind of attitude, the station might reach their goal quicker than anticipated.

Jack Smith gave a moving speech while everyone paid close attention. Square Pan Pizza was a favorite spot for the station to hold their meetings.

Team Work Pays

The Associated Student Body was a group of individuals that led and governed the school. The A.S.B. was responsible for the assemblies, dances, food drives, spirit activities, homecoming, the convention, and student spirit items. The A.S.B. also allotted money to individual clubs. The class worked at all spirit events and made sure that the school was informed of these events. A.S.B. consisted of four major officers and nine commissioners, which were elected by the student body. The remainder of the A.S.B. class was very important because without these individuals, known as assistants, A.S.B. would not have run as effectively as it had in the past. "To be successful, we, the A.S.B., must work as a team to get people in-involved with school spirit and pride," stated Al Guerra. The four major officers played a big role in the class. They made sure that all tasks were taken care of and done on time. Due to the fact that three of the four major officers had not previously been in A.S.B., the class sometimes went through some tough times. "At the beginning of the year it was tough, but towards the end things really settled down," said Bill Cegelka, Commissioner of Alumni. "The inexperience ended up as a definite plus on our side because it made the class more of a team," stated Jay Marquand, "What one person lacks the others make up for to establish balance in our A.S.B."

The Clarion staff worked hard to publish an interesting and appealing paper to the student body. Making this possible was an eager and hard working staff. The editor-in-chief, Holly Thomas said, "Even though the staff was almost entirely new, we benefitted from the new talent and ideas." This proved true with the excellent coverage of the activities around campus and the unique writing styles of the staff. Kelly Fitzgerald, Student Advisor Editor, commented, "This was the best staff ever assembled. It allowed us to take off a lot of the work and pressure from Mr. Sebastian and Mr. Farrar." According to the response and comments of the students around campus the Clarion staff did exactly what they set out to do — make an excellent paper.

Varsity Shines

The 1987-88 Varsity Cheer proved to be one of the most determined and unified squads. Being able to rally up participation in the crowds at the games, they promoted more school spirit and pride. They also placed high in the competitions held throughout the school year, and for the second year in a row were awarded runner-up for the "Award of Excellence" at cheer camp.

Everyone on the squad had previously been a cheerleader. This proved to be a big advantage because they had worked with others before in creating new cheers and routines. Being familiar with the skills involved in cheer, enabled them to advance to more difficult stunts. Another thing they had learned from previous experience was, "We all have to want to work together as one to succeed," commented Lisa Sowards.

The gymnastic ability on the squad was another major asset. Many of them acquired this skill and added a little more spark to the routines. "Hard work, determination, and unity helped us to be where we are," added captain Jeannie Henderson.

J.V. Adds Spark

The J.V. Cheer squad dedicated a tremendous amount of time in preparing for sporting events, pep assemblies, cheer competitions, and fundraisers. Every girl knew that it would take a big commitment on her part to reach their ultimate goal: to promote school spirit.

One word that came to the squads mind about practices was "exhausting." Homecoming was one of the biggest events of the year. "For two weeks, we practiced for two hours every day on our routine for homecoming," commented the captain, Megan Almquist. Another main goal of the squad was to hold the title of the Grossmont League Cheer Competition. Because of their determination to place high, they spent a great deal of time preparing for competitions. The girls' hard work, careful preparation, and commitment helped them reach perfection in their routines.

Club Succeeds

The HI*SIGN Club (Hearing Impaired Students In Growth Networking) was one of the newly formed clubs on campus. The club was founded by advisor Susan Succa and the "Class of 1988" hearing-impaired students. The officers of the club were: President — "Dolly" Schwab, Secretary — "K.C." Conant, Treasurer — Jay Howell, Accountant — Eddie Uriarte, Publicity — Mike Zehner, Fund Raising — Jason Brown, and Greetings/Hospitality — Gina Conley, Kelly Hall, and Paige Sherkenback. All the officers are in the graduating class of 88 except for "K.C." Conant, who is in the class of 89. There were approximately 30 members in the club. They held a variety of fund raisers, such as bake sales, calendar sales, and button sales.

The purpose of the club was to promote responsibility, and develop individual and group support systems. The club was found to be a success for their first year. In the "88-89" school year they hope to have around 30 members again. "We're hoping to see more underclassmen and women become more involved with the planning, organizing, and follow-through of the activities," stated Advisor Susan Succa.

S.A.D.D. Saves Lives

In 1988 S.A.D.D. (Students Against Driving Drunk) had its biggest year ever. Holly Thomas president of S.A.D.D. exclaims, "This was definitely the best year for S.A.D.D. because of the enthusiasm for each and every member." Holly has been president for four years. Mr. Schimpf did a marvelous job as S.A.D.D.'s advisor.

For Drug Awareness Week in November of '87, members in S.A.D.D. met every day during lunch to organize the drug-free pledges for the students to sign, and cut the red ribbons for the students to wear. The red ribbons symbolized the commitment students made for a drug-free life. Holly Thomas, President, Taralyn Rose, Vice-President, Tracy Curry, Treasurer, and Mrs. Rice, Co-Advisor, presented these pledges to the San Diego County Board of Supervisors. This presentation was aired on television to show the people of San Diego that there are young people taking control of their lives by saying 'no' to drugs.

Many students in the past have gotten the motives behind the S.A.D.D. organization confused. S.A.D.D. stated that their job was not to tell teenagers whether or not they should drink. S.A.D.D.'s job is to keep young people from driving while under the influence. Some teens might think it's cool to get behind the wheel after drinking, but as Mrs. Rice bluntly stated, "It's not cool to lose a friend."

I-Club Grows

The International Club was a group of students from many countries. The American students held meetings in their homes and they organized group activities to show the exchange students a good time. As I-Club president, Andrea Robinson stated, "The I-Club is a good chance for the foreign exchange students to learn about American social life." The I-Club also provided a way for American students to learn about far away cultures. Some of the I-Club activities included a trip to Disneyland, a Halloween party, a Christmas party, and trips to San Diego's finest attractions. The students, both American and foreign, enjoyed going out together. Although the I-Club was open to everyone, many students thought I-Club was only open to exchange students and their families. It was important to note that I-Club welcomed all students. This was a way to promote world peace by extending a new friendship among countries. One of the I-Club's biggest events was the trip to Disneyland. The exchange students enjoyed a first-hand look at the Magic Kingdom. Alex Bardenz was quoted as saying, "I really love Disneyland, but where is Mickey?" The International Club provided a good way to meet new and exciting people.

G.H.A.W. Gets A New Look

The in-thing in drama was not theatrical clothes nor way out behavior. The new look was a letterman's jacket. Yes, on Campus you may have mistaken a football or soccer player for the hero or heroine of the year's G.H.A.W.'s productions of "Arsenic and Old Lace," "The Time Machine," or "West Side Story." With hard work on five shows, a G.H.A.W. member may have earned his/her letter in a year and one half.

Drama Club members also participated in school activities off-stage. The Homecoming halftime show ran smoothly due to G.H.A.W.'s technical expertise. And if you "landed in jail" at the Homecoming Carnival, a G.H.A.W. member probably locked you up. Theatrical presentations have definitely reflected letterman quality of excellence at Granite Hills.

Students Hit Mammoth

Picture yourself in the high mountains among many trees and beautiful plants. You hear the birds singing, the streams running, and the faint murmur of the wind flowing through the tree branches. You see the big brown mountains surrounding you, and their rigid exterior very dry and rocky. But then you start to feel a little chilly. Your arms are piled with goosebumps, and your toes begin to feel numb. The blue sky above you looks as though it's disappearing and being replaced with dark, gloomy clouds. You stop to look and suddenly realize that you are slowly turning into an ice cube. The birds are gone and the wind has picked up. It is blowing constantly through the trees. You begin to understand what is happening. You get a weird feeling inside of you that won't go away. You try to ignore it, but somehow this feeling takes control and you do it!!! You run frantically to Mr. Arens' office and beg him to take you on the ski trip to Mammoth. Mr. Arens comes through once again and lets you go.

Some ski fanatics can relate to this kind of situation. Within a split second, they were the ones ready for our trip to Mammoth. The weather had been really fair and comfortable; then suddenly temperatures dropped and snow fell. Because of ideal conditions, there was a good turnout for the trip. About forty people attended. Kristy Schimpf commented, "It was really great having so many people going. We all had a wonderful time."

Hopefully, ski conditions will be just as good for the ski members in the following years.

Mat Maids Help Wrestlers Win

To the naked eye, it may have seemed that the success of our wrestling team depended only on the coaches and the wrestlers. This was far from the truth! A vital part of our team's success was the mat maids.

These were the girls often seen sitting attentively on the sidelines at every meet. Each and every Thursday during the season, the mat maids assisted the coaches in taking down scores, tracking the wrestlers' progress and watching the referee's hand signals. Not only was this a great relief to the coach, but it was also a good way for the wrestlers to receive constructive criticism. More than once, the mat maids have settled disputes with the information they've gathered.

Along with their technical expertise, the girls supported the wrestlers by keeping them motivated and installing confidence in them. Their contributions were far more than simply going to tournaments and providing drinks for the team. Lorie Sturgeon who was a mat maid for one year said, "Being a mat maid is a good way to meet people and to keep busy." She found her work fun and exciting.

Through all of their effort, they helped the wrestlers improve and make the team more successful. Their loyalty proved that behind every great wrestler there really is a great mat maid!

CSF Students Tutor Classmates

CSF students once again did a variety of activities, as with other years, and one of the activities they kept up with was tutoring.

Tutors were available to all students for a very minimal fee. To be tutored, the first hour was free, and then there were varied rates from then on. After the first hour, it was usually around five dollars per hour. "Most students usually only get tutored for a couple of days, or right before finals," replied Melanie Somers. A student need not be failing to get a tutor, in fact some students with B's will get a tutor so they can get an A. Tutors, for different subjects, were chosen by their points of interests, and their ability to excell in that particular subject, or in some cases, subjects. Major topics tutored were required courses with a few more popular electives also tutored.

Although there are a lot of tutors, not everyone in CSF could tutor students, partly because they were not needed or possibly because they didn't have time. While some would tutor just one person a week, some tutors helped up to three. As most people just look at tutoring as just work and doing it for money, others think of it as a fun and interesting way to meet people.

A HORSE, A HORSE, A CLUB FOR MY HORSE!

The Equestrian Club was a new club on campus, as well as in the county. As Ms. Lockman, the sponsor of the club stated, "We are, as far as I know, the only Equestrian Club in any of the high schools around here." The club met once a month, which allowed the members to discuss their personal competitions that they had completed since the last time they met. The members all owned their own horses, but the club was open to those without horses. The only thing needed was their interest in horses. The members of the club gave a superb showing at the Homecoming Carnival. With the use of a horse-rig, they gave students a ride around the school. They had one party during the school year, and at the Easter Sunrise Service they all showed up on horseback. Another goal was to go to Manzanita Horse Camp, where there were horse stalls and camp sites. There they could ride some of the many horse trails in the Cuyamaca Hills. Ms. Lockman looked at the club optimistically, in hopes that one day the 12-15 members would grow into a larger number.

Where The Elite Meet

Since the fall of Beelzebub into the depths of eternal darkness, mankind has always hungered for power, greed, and immortality. The Academic League has offered just this. Students longing for the power of knowledge, the greed of being first, and the immortality of victory have sold their souls to Mr. Sebastian in return for an exalted membership in this infamous regime. Meticulously improving their academic skills, the students strive for the ultimate accomplishment — a spot on the first team. As they answered their way to eternity, the league remembered the sacred prayer: if all else fails, the answer is "C"!

Approximately 65 to 75 students, from various advanced math classes competed monthly in the California Math League. In order to belong to the league, one had to take a six question test in 35 minutes. The students' results were sent in to be compared with all high schools in California. Why did the students subject their mental stability to these mind teasing problems? Could it have been to get extra credit from their math teachers? How absurd! Never did a thought like that come before the students pride in achieving. No matter how much anxiety the testing caused, the students were committed to making Granite Hills number one in the State of California.

GRANITE

HILLS

SEAL OF EXCELLANCE

Sports

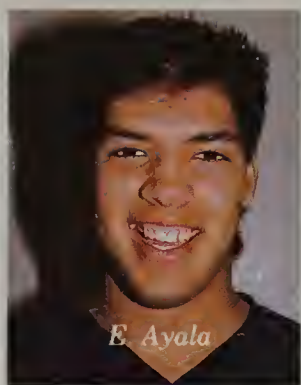

Granite Hills' 1987-88 sports season proved to be yet another excellent year in athletics. Many students excelled in sports both in and out of school. Sports ranging from ATC racing to 100 mile bike rides, showcased the fine talents of Granite Hills athletes.

Although our school teams did a good job, some of the local pro teams didn't fair quite so well. The padres, under a new manager, got off to their worst start in their history. Picking up the pace in the middle of the season, they then dropped back down into last place, not only in their division, but in the entire league! The Padres ended the season about 20 games out of first! The Soccers also slacked off their pace by losing in the playoffs. It was the only time since San Diego turned indoors, that they didn't win the championship. Football season started off on the right foot until a strike occurred. Scab players, however, kept the football crowds coming to the games. The Chargers went up to first place in their division and on to a good year. They were picked to do well in the season and to make the playoffs.

Excelling in personal sports, many students received sports scholarships to reputable colleges. Some athletes took many years to reach athletic prowess while others started a sport in high school and by the time they were seniors, were contenders in league activity. In keeping up with their Eagle pride, many of the athletes worked long hours to prove dominance in their sport and stamp the sport with their "Seal of Excellence".

INEXPERIENCE LEADS TO EXCELLENCE

The 87 — 88 Varsity Football Team opened the season with only five returning lettermen. Coach Wargo stated, "We started out with a young and inexperienced team." He had confidence that the 87-88 year would not end their 15 years of success. The beginning of the season started out rough with the Eagles losing 3 out of 5 games. This is unusual for our football team. As the season progressed, our football team remained confident and gained much needed experience.

The hard work, extra effort and determination paid off as the Eagles had strong wins against Valhalla, Santana and Monte Vista. Their confidence carried them on to another successful year.

School spirit flourished as the stadiums roared with spirit at home as well as away games. Thanks to our cheerleaders, more spirit was promoted this season. More spirit assemblies and activities helped carry our outstanding Eagle team through a rough, but successful year.

J.V. PROVES THEMSELVES

The J.V. Football team was made up largely of freshmen and sophomores. Coach Mikolajewski felt that most of the sophomores should start in the coming season. Some of those players included Shane Spencer as running back and Jim Goulart on defense. A varsity quarterback prospect was Bobby Howe. Coach Mikolajewski also stated that the offense was strong and they had the discipline and stamina it took to make up a great varsity squad. Although some players were small and had little playing experience, Coach Mikolajewski said, "One year makes a big difference". The J.V. players also had strong feelings about the team and teammates. Matt Mellinger and James Weeks stated, "Even though we get the least recognition, every game we give 110% in the trenches (battle zones)." Our J.V. hopes to make a big hit in the coming season.

by Marcie LaRochelle

J.V. Football player Keith Ancell hoped to be one of the sophomores to make the varsity squad next season. Keith felt that this year was one of his best. Playing defensive line, Keith recorded two fumble recoveries and several sacks in only three games. He felt that he has learned many important things about high school football such as teamwork and working with the coaches.

VARSITY WORKS TOGETHER

The 87-88 Varsity Volleyball team changed quite a bit from the 86-87 team. According to Melanie McMillen, a senior, "Last year a lot of the girls tried to compete to be the best individually; this year we are striving to be the best as a team." The team tried to work on the court with more group effort by helping each other out with different plays.

The team cheered the other individual members when good plays were made, and even when some bad plays were made. "Even when you mess up, you still get a slap on the hand, a kind word from the team to let you know it's o.k. and not to give up," says Laura Becker, a junior.

The Varsity team has proved to be very good because of their growing experience as players and the way they worked together as a whole team; not as individuals.

Laura Becker, a junior player, was noted as being a great asset to the volleyball team. Laura started playing volleyball on J. V. and was moved up as one of the top Varsity players.

Laura went to volleyball camp at S.D.S.U. She explained, "While I learned, I improved my game, and kept in shape for this season."

The J.V. Volleyball team proved that hard work pays off. The team is fairly new with only two returning players, Terah Dagley and Krishna Muhich. Although the team seemed inexperienced, they played remarkably well. The girls had an impressive season with almost an undefeated record.

The key to the Eagles' success is their noted team effort. "There is no single individual that stands out, but there are about six of them," Coach Neel commented. Also, front row player Lori Sprague and back row player Janelle Nerat contributed greatly with their exceptional playing. Over all, everyone played a major part on the team in their own way. VARSITY WORKS TOGETHER Tennis. We've all played it in one form or another. Some people swat at flies, others bat at well aimed spit balls. But the girls on Varsity Tennis turned it into a sport well worth watching.

Their Coach Patty Tibbets said, "We have a lot of talent, these girls pull together as a family." This characteristic is one that makes a team a team. Because these girls felt good with each other they were able to work together in such a way that makes a person say, "Wow!" Daphne Porterfield says, "This is my first year on the team and I have never in my life seen a team work together so well." It is easy to see that the girls really know how a team works.

This was Daphne Porterfield's first year on the team. She has been a tremendous asset to the Girls' Varsity Tennis Team. Daphne says, "The whole team is great. I haven't seen so many girls pull together like this before." Although she was a newcomer, the team has been very appreciative of her efforts.

Gretchen Teckemeyer shows great style in her ability to hit the ball in such awkward positions.

With a hop, skip and a jump Angie Gentile returns a vicious serve. Serves were often a deciding factor in the games.

EXCELLENCE IN J.V. TENNIS

During the 1987-88 season, the Girls' J.V. Tennis Team excelled in their sport. With many experienced players returning to the team, along with new team members, the J.V. team continued to be as strong as they have been in the past.

The team remained highly ranked throughout the season as they worked hard to sharpen their skills. Many team members felt they deserved the same credit as Varsity and worked to earn it. As Sonja Lusteg said, "We feel we're as good as the Varsity and we want to prove it." Although many J.V. teams are considered second-rate, this one was not! Through hours of practice, hard work, and the help of coach Patty Tibbets, the J.V. tennis team continued to excel.

by Kristy Wiese

Although there were many fine players on the J.V. tennis team, an extraordinary one was Lorraine Watson. She loves the sport and enjoys the competition involved in playing for Granite Hills, but her greatest love is winning! Along with playing in school matches, she even took part in tournaments outside of school and she hopes to play in many more. Because of her love of the sport, Lorraine plans to continue playing tennis throughout her life for her own personal satisfaction.

PLAYERS EARN RESPECT

Ranked as underdogs, the 1987 Water Polo team, led by their fearless coach, Travis Thomson, were a devastating group of tan warriors that proved they had what it takes. The team's newly acquired coach harnessed much of the raw talent showing his ability to bring the team together. Varsity's Garth Isom told reporters, "Travis is one of the biggest improvements to our team. He has earned the respect of all our players." Throughout the season emotions ran high, and all the hard work and dedication began to pay off. By mid-season it was apparent that the Eagles were a team to be feared.

Workouts were especially difficult. The players were not always eager to dive into the cold water at 6 a.m., spend a day at school with chlorine-dried skin, and finally face a grueling afternoon workout.

The Varsity squad had many outstanding individuals while still performing as a team. Some of the top players were Charlie Geng with his perfect form and blazing speed; Jake Gaeir whose strength enabled him to outmaneuver opponents, and the goalie, Jay Marquand, who risked his nose every game. The well-rounded team had much strength and depth. Such players as: Jon Anderson, Matt Edic, Steve Whyte, Randy Callahan, Greg Sherman, Garth Isom, Kevin Clark, and Mike Roberts all provided the necessary stamina and spirit. Greg Sherman summed it up well by saying, "It's a physically demanding sport, this year we dared to want it all."

Steve Whyte, a returning letterman, provided skill and humor for his team. Steve was a key offensive player, and although he did not always score he never failed to create some commotion or pump his team up.

The 1987-88 most valuable runners for the Cross Country team were Steve Scheidel and Ed Hennessey. They were rated the number 1 and 2 runners respectively in the league. They both ran on the Track team where they were both just as competitive. Ed stated, "It is really weird how I can beat him on the track, but not during cross country. Hopefully I will beat him there, too." They both could be seen chalking up many miles on both the track and on the road.

RUNNERS REMAIN RESTED

The Cross Country teams go beyond a brisk jog, and they don't stop until they have passed total exhaustion. They exert themselves over courses often longer than two miles. They run through the valleys and over the mountains, and what does all of the exercise yield to them . . . nothing but total relaxation when the grueling race is over. Often shown in the faces while finishing a monstrosity of a course, is the look that this person has conquered the unconquerable and is able to now rest and prepare for next week. Although the anxiety is high, there is relaxation in the future for these seekers of pain. When they prepare themselves for a race that will last twenty minutes for some and fifteen for others, they take the time to relax and psychologically prepare themselves to further prove their excellency among the other runners in the league and San Diego County.

COMING ON STRONG

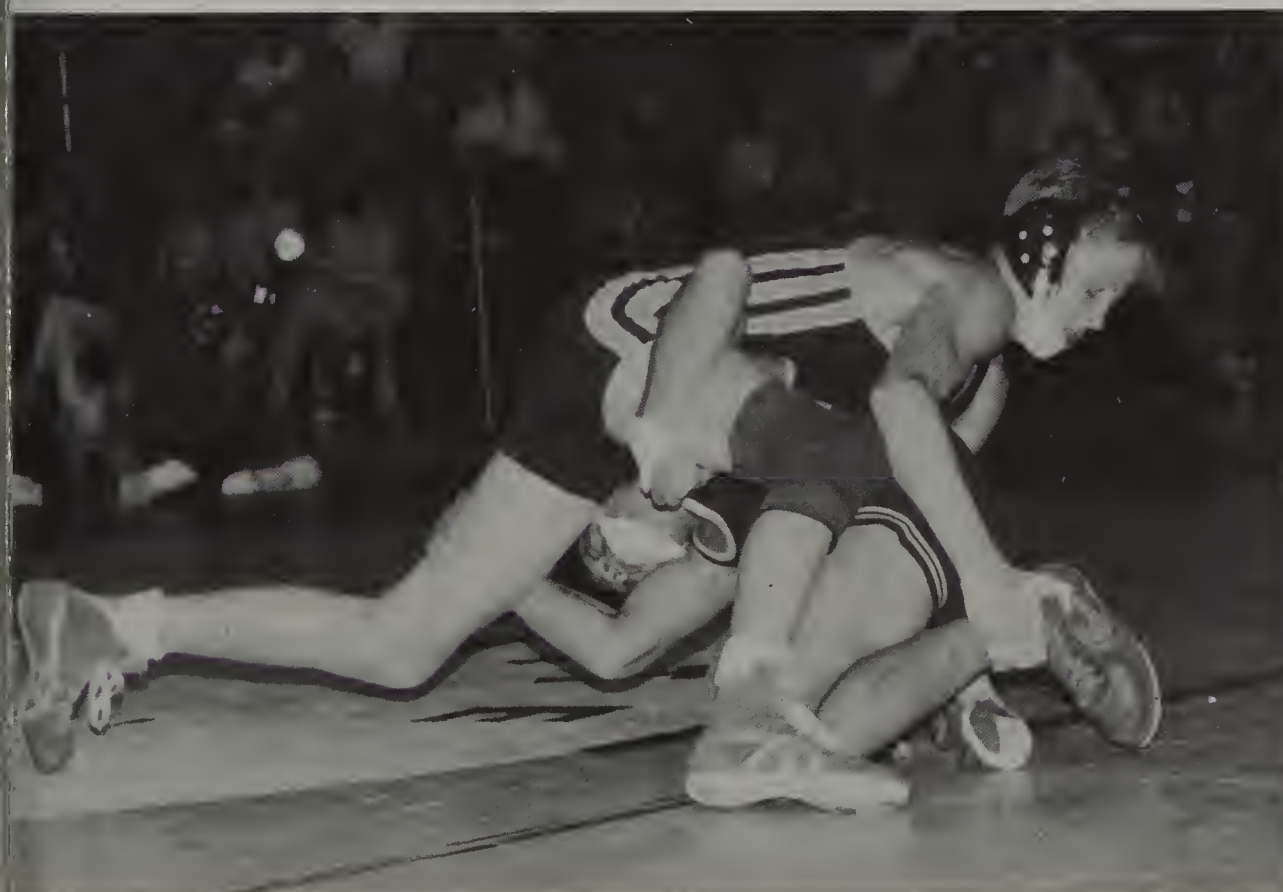

Hard work and dedication was the key to making the 1987-88 Wrestling Team one of the best Granite Hills has ever had. It took many long hours plus much hard work and practice to put our Eagle team on the road to excellence. Concentration and determination radiated from the team as they moved on from victory to victory. Experienced team members returned as new and dedicated members helped to bring our team into another year of success. Many hours of coaching and support inspired team members into giving all of their energy to reaching the ultimate goal of a C.I.F. victory.

ATTITUDE BRINGS WINS

"You need a tough mental attitude to be a good wrestler." These were the words spoken by Coach Gist. From the beginning to the end of the season, the attitude of the players was filled with determination, strength, and dedication. Practices were rough. The players first took on a strenuous four mile run, then finally spent an hour and a half wrestling. The wrestlers would always work on psyching themselves up before the matches, which gave them a mental edge. The majority of the players agreed that all of their work and preparation enabled them to feel confident when they stepped on to the mat.

EXCELLENCE ABOUNDS

With many returning players, the 1987-1988 Boys' Varsity Basketball team started the season with confidence. The few players that moved up from J.V. proved to be assets to the team.

The team began practicing last year and continued through the summer. Many Varsity players gained from their continuing efforts.

With strength, experience, and high spirits, the Eagle team worked their way through the season. As a varsity letterman, Shawn Ruff stated, "We've worked long hours to get the experience we needed, and it payed off." Coach Jeff Armstrong has worked with this team for two years to turn them around and make Granite Hills Varsity Basketball better than ever.

PREPARE FOR THE FUTURE

The Boys' Junior Varsity Basketball team was made up of freshmen, sophomores, and some juniors who planned on moving on to bigger and better things — namely the Varsity team! The team's goal this year was to place in the Grossmont High School District. Joe Roose, the Junior Varsity Coach said, "Our main goal for this year is to prepare these guys for Varsity ball." Every night, Monday through Friday, from 6:30 to 9:00 p.m., the J.V. team practiced basketball in the Granite Hills gym. They worked, sweated, ate, and slept basketball. Don't be surprised if one day you find these young men playing on professional basketball teams. Yes, it's true, these guys definitely prepared for the future.

PLAYERS KICK ON

Throughout the 1987-88 season, the soccer team used their experience and skills to help them work together as a team. The game was soccer and the attitude was determination. The once popular ski trips were forgotten when the season began, and the team went back to the basic fundamentals. They devoted two and a half hours a day to their new "attack" offense and prepared for their tough games against Valhalla and Grossmont. Using a mixture of plays helped the offense use all the veteran talent. The team consisted of many returning lettermen such as: Laith Haisha, D.J. Lester, Gavin Dunn, Steve Haesaker, Jeff Province, Scott Orth, and Robbie Ironside. "The team is rebuilding the defense from last year," Laith Haisha told reporters. The players were set on winning and in the end they proved to do just that.

GIRLS KEEP IT IN MOTION

The Girls Varsity Soccer team was better than ever before in the 1987-88 season. Although the team lost many experienced players last year, new and returning players made the team stronger than ever. Some of the season's outstanding seniors were Martie Creech, Kirsten Fenn, Tanya Slojowski, and Melanie Somers. Every player excelled and by working together the girls were really a team. The 1987-88 choice for Girls' J.V. Basketball is Sally Wade. She is only a freshman, but displays her ability all the time on the court. She is one of the leaders in points and her size helps her in rebounds. She will definitely be an addition to Varsity in the future.

Blocking the ball the Eagle defense swarms in on an offensive player. The defense proved to be very successful this year.

J.V. GAIN EXPERIENCE

The Girls Junior Varsity Basketball team has enhanced their skills over the past season. Basketball is a sport that requires a great amount of skill and coordination. All season the girls have trained and worked hard, practiced long, rigorous hours after school, along with maintaining a 2.0 grade point average. This is necessary for each player to stay on the team.

One of the strengths of our team was the height of our players. "The J.V. team has an unusual amount of tall girls," admitted Coach Bocko. Another important factor was the incredible amount of team work exhibited at the games.

The hard work, determination, and skill brought forth by these girls made the team what it was.

CROWDS INVADE GYM

With each passing year, boys' volleyball has increased in popularity with the students at Granite Hills. When the boys' volleyball team began to take form, the stands were bare. However, the team drew large crowds to the school gymnasium during their 1988 season.

Eagles flocked to the games for a variety of reasons. Some went for a social aspect. Others, like the girls' volleyball team, went to the games to support the boys' team and to watch a good game. Yet there were still others that went for more expressive reasons, as Jill Curry subtly stated, "I rarely knew the score ... I just went to watch the guys!"

The large crowds that spilled into the gymnasium shouted cheers of excitement which permeated through the air. These shouts spurred on the team's spirit which helped the team in a positive way.

EFFORTS PAID

OFF

The dedicated tennis team's success was linked to hard working Coach Lon Underwood. He kept the team's act together physically and mentally. Christoph Herbst, a German exchange student, stated, "We go on special trips like Palm Springs and Disneyland which strengthens our team spirit." Lon Underwood also encouraged the players to work together during practices. The members supported one another through thick and thin. Coach Underwood also built each team members stamina with hard work. Long practices after school brought about the team's success. Few people appreciated the tremendous amount of work the team endured to improve their skills. Tennis demands great effort to perform well, and Granite Hills Tennis Team met that demand.

NEW FACES

LEARN

QUICKLY

The Junior Varsity Boys' Tennis Team consisted of all new players with an exception of only one returning player, Eric Harness. Despite the fairly new team, they all still worked very hard during the practices in learning new skills and techniques. With persistence and willingness to learn, they were prepared for the games. Although most of the matches were competed individually, encouraging and helping each other out was very important for a successful season. Another key to their success was the positive attitude present on the team. They did not take losses as a sign to give up but as a sign to push harder to reach their goals. Due to their high qualities of determination, persistence, and great effort, the '88 J.V. Tennis Team proved to be a winning one.

Returning player, Eric Harness proved to be a major asset to the team. He has been playing tennis for about four years, and he enjoyed the competitive spirit involved in the sport. With his determination, he brought many wins for the team, and he was one of the top players.

GOLFERS

DREAM BIG

There once was a golfer who woke up on a Friday morning not knowing what he wanted in life. He thought to himself, "Why do I even bother hitting a little ball into a small hole?" Grabbing his golf equipment, he left for school. Then the time came, 2:30 p.m., the usual meeting took place at Granite Hills. "O.k. men, lets get out on that course and win another one for the person that means the most, me!" announced Coach Mac.

At the golf course, they practiced a few swings, and took shots on the driving range. Mr. Golfer thought to himself, "I figured it out, the only reason I am doing this is to become good at golf, and be a professional like that one guy, Jack WHO? I am going to be a millionaire, and live happily ever after, just me and my golf clubs."

Coach McAdams considers Jeff Eucce to be one of the better golfers on the team. Jeff's dad, Jim, got him started in golfing. He is contemplating going into golfing as a life long profession.

With over four years of experience behind him, Mike Mills was a great help to the 1988 Lacrosse Team. His knowledge helped the team over some rough spots during the season. LACROSSE FIGHTS FOR SUPPORT

Lacrosse is a fighting sport in more ways than one. It is not only an aggressive, macho kind of game, but also was fighting for CIF standing in the Grossmont District. For years, Granite has had a lacrosse team, but only at club level. Team members had to raise the money for equipment and uniforms on their own. Many players on the 1988 team were new to the sport, or had been playing for only a short time. CIF standing could definitely help lacrosse by generating enthusiasm and creating publicity. As a club, though, the team was struggling for support and recognition. Very few people went to the games — mostly friends and family of the players. The sport itself is exciting and tough. Elements from hockey and rugby combine to create a daring and non-stop action game. As Coach Barber put it, "It's not a civilized, slow-moving sport."

by Lara Poulson

Peter Cushman and Pat Woodward fend each other off as they try to gain control of the ball. In this aggressive contact sport, helmet, shoulder pads and gloves came in handy.

Coach James McGregor blocks player Sean Alexander. Vigorous practice like this helped strengthen the team.

NEW COACHES

INSPIRE GIRLS

The gymnastic team was not only joined by many new promising athletes, but most importantly by two new enthusiastic coaches. Laura Valley brings with her seven years of experience. Kelly Broge has one year of coaching experience, but many years of competitive experience which helps the gymnasts excel.

"The girls are really good and have great potential," stated Ms. Valley.

"Ms. Valley is a great addition. She gives us the enthusiasm which is what helps us to do better," replied Wendy Ferland.

Gymnastics is a very demanding sport. It requires hours of muscle toning and intense training. The girls competed in various events in which they demonstrated their skill and agility.

by Dan Wirtz

Wendy Ferland and Ginger Smith, this years team captains, were the most talented and inspirational gymnasts. Their grace and agility enabled them to be real leaders. Wendy Ferland has been competing for ten years. At the age of eleven, her hard work paid off where she placed fifth at the Rhode Island Gymnastic Tournament. Ginger Smith has been competing for nine years. When she was a sophomore she won Most Valuable Player, Compulsory, Best Vault and Best Floor Exercise.

Kristy Schimpf shows her strength and balance by successfully executing a handstand on the balance beam. She has been a strong competitor throughout the season.

NEW COACH SPARKS EXCITEMENT

Coach Lund and manager Killeen Hodges hoped to inspire the team to victory. It was Coach Lund's first year of coaching our boys' swim team.

The boys swim team started with a new coach during the '88 season. Coach Lund was a competitive swimmer for 15 years. He was very excited about coaching the swim team. He was also happy to see the enthusiasm displayed by the seniors on the team. Although the team was made up of boys from ninth through twelfth, the seniors made up the strongest part. The relay medley team, made up of Charlie Geng, Randy Callahan, Matt Edic, and Jay Marquand was also strong. The team spirit was powerful. Jon Anderson stated, "Camaraderie is the main boost for the team." The team was excited about having a new coach. Pre-training was very important. Coach Lund wants to help the team to become better and the time in the water helped to condition their muscles and their times. Being on the waterpolo team helped to prepare most of the swimmers for the swim team. Jay Marquand, one of the swimmers from the waterpolo team was an important part of the team and his junior year was quite good. The experience of Coach Lund helped to better the team as a whole.

GIRLS SPLASH TO VICTORY

Coach Matern had led the girls swim team for several seasons. Once again, he had high hopes for the Varsity swim team. There were eleven returning swimmers and seven senior swimmers. Autumn Maize and Susan Schoonmaker were among the returning seniors. Coach Matern believed that the team had a lot of great swimmers. The top swimmers included Michelle Butcher, Carolyn Tart, and Elizabeth Fuller. These were also the CIF hopefuls the girls team led the league in the butterfly Julia Bonstat and Autumn Maize were also CIF bound. The Varsity team got help from freshman Dawn Huse. The team practiced five days a week and they swam thousands of yards every practice. The girls swim team steadily improved over the season. Team talent and desire enabled them to swim extremely well. Coach Matern was an inspiration to the team. "I feel the team has become stronger with the new talent and persistence to win," stated Coach Matern. This was Coach Matern's last year coaching at Granite Hills. He will be sorely missed.

Autumn Maize had been swimming competitively for four years. She swam for Heartland as well as for Granite Hills in her junior year. She went to CIF in her sophomore and junior years. She hoped to swim in college. Autumn was a great asset to our Granite Hills Girls' Swim team.

ATHLETES SHOW EXCELLENCE

No matter what the track or field event, whether it was running, hurdles, relay, long jump, high jump, shotput, discus or triple jump, one thing remained the same — the goal of excellence. In such a demanding sport as track, excellence was not easily achieved. It took long hours of practice and complete determination to reach the top in any event. The athlete needed to be not only strong, but also adept in the skills and techniques of her event.

Unlike the runners in the movie "Chariots of Fire", the Granite Hills Girls' Track Team did not run in slow motion on pearly white beaches with orchestra music playing in the background. No, they ran on hard-packed red dirt in the blazing sun, with nothing but the sound of their own rhythmic breathing and quick pulse pounding in their ears. Excellence was not achieved by everyone, but by the looks of the 1988 Girls' Track Team, Granite Hills sure had its share of achievers.

When most people think of track, they think of only running. Though running is a large part of track, it entails a variety of events, such as: hurdles, high jump, relay, long jump, shot put, triple jump and discus. The one event that separated girls from boys track was the pole vault. This was the one event exclusive to boys. Long hours of hard work and dedication were poured into the making of the team. Good work, Eagles, we love you!

TREMENDOUS ABILITY SHOWN

The 1988 Varsity Softball proved to be a team of tremendous ability. Having all played for Granite Hills before, the players were well-prepared going into the season. "Consisting of seven returning players and all experienced ones, the team was very strong," commented Coach Neel. The girls performed well on the field with strong hitters like Kirsten Fenn, Lisa Iavelli, Denise Holmes, and good pitching by Holly Moffet and Carla Klingshirn. Furthermore, the team played as well defensively as they did offensively.

Another key to their success was the enthusiasm present on the team. The girls would always go into a game with a positive attitude. No matter how the outcome appeared to be in the middle of the game, they always kept their spirits high and continued to play their best. With team unity, talent, and school spirit, it is no surprise why the team had such a successful season.

WITHIN NEW TALENT, COMES SUCCESS

The 1988 Junior Varsity Softball team consisted of mainly freshman. In fact the only two returning players on the team were Kari Lindsey and Jenny Root. Their efforts, combined with new talent, created a successful combination of players. Both returning players felt their success was partially due to the fact that many of the girls had played together in previous leagues. Jenny Root stated, "We worked well as a team and most of us knew each other before now." The team agreed that Coach Deesing did a great job coaching. His humor influenced the team's attitude. They worked hard and enjoyed how their efforts paid off. Kari Lindsey commented, "He kept our practices short but a lot was done to improve our skills during the limited time." The new faces and strengthened friendships proved 1988 to be a terrific year for softball.

COACH INSPIRES SUCCESS

Since 1977, Coach Gordy Thompson has led our Varsity baseball team to many victories. "The best part of coaching is being with the kids, watching them grow, improve and succeed," commented Coach Thompson. That's exactly what he had the chance to do, see players improve and succeed.

Coach Thompson had many reasons to be proud of his past teams. Our Eagles have won the Lions Tournament 3 times. Once in 1977, 1978 and then again in 1987. Not only were they C.I.F. champs in 1977, but they also have been league champs twice.

The coach's talent didn't go unnoticed. His players look up to him and were all ears when he had something to say. "Coach takes pride in the team that we have and each individual on it. Whether it's on or off the baseball field. I feel he's a real good coach," commented Shane Boyd.

Our Varsity team only had three returning players: Mike Raskind, Mike Cheechi and Brian Giles. Coach Thompson didn't let this setback get him or his team down. He knew he had a lot of good talent in his younger players and he intended to use it to the best of his advantage. John Fenn and Shane Boyd were both new-comers to the Varsity team. They did extremely well and their coach was proud.

Mike Raskind has played baseball for eight years. Mike is known for his outstanding pitching. He made the All Grossmont League team his Sophomore and Junior year. He made 2nd team C.I.F. his Junior year, Mike broke and now holds the record for the most wins at G.H.

EXPERIENCED EAGLES

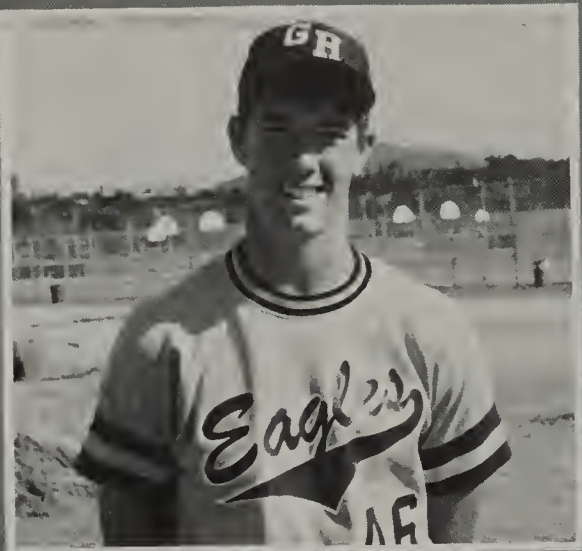

The J.V. baseball team was formed after two cuts during a vigorous two-week tryout, which included Saturdays. "It was hard to cut as many people as I did since everybody was so experienced," said Coach Watkins. At least forty boys tried out ... most having previous baseball experience, and others from pony-league all-star teams; however, only eighteen were chosen.

The chosen players have all played baseball for an average of eight years. They often played games against their teammates from little league and pony, but according to freshman Chris Boggs, "That makes it more fun!" The players' love and dedication to baseball helped to form a winning team, but it doesn't stop there! Several players have hopes of making it to a major league team, but right now they are putting all their concentration into making the J.V. team the best that it can be.

Short-stop Ryan Braun executes a perfect bunt. Bunting was crucial for advancing the runners to third base.

Ryan O'Coyne was recognized as an outstanding baseball pitcher and first baseman. Though he is only a freshman, his athletic abilities allowed him to rise above his teammates. His contribution to the team was an asset to Granite Hills. There is no doubt that Ryan's athletic abilities will open many doors for him in the future.

SENIORS

Choices. Choices. Aahh!! I couldn't take it!! If I received just one more measly bit of mail from a college, I was going to go crazy!! You know what I'm talking about Seniors, all of those college letters saying how you (and probably five thousand others) are so right for their school. Gimme a break! O.K., so it did feel good to know that a school found you worthy enough to send you information about their school, but that wasn't all that this year held for the class of '88.

So many unforgettable memories made this year one of the best years of our lives. Being able to remember back when we were freshmen, the little kids on the block, and noticing just how big and mighty those Seniors looked. And that the freshmen appeared to get smaller and smaller each year after that, until now when we as Seniors must undertake that responsibility and set an example for the underclassmen.

Not only did we wonder what our plans were for the weekend, but we also had to make important decisions that would shape our futures. Just trying to decide what to do after graduation, whether it was going to college or not was a big enough step, that brought the class of '88 all that much closer to realizing that this year was one that did shape the rest of our lives and had them stamped with a Seal of Excellence.

Best Dressed

It's easy to see how Tiffany Hoover and Tim McMahon were chosen for their classy dressing styles. Both Tiffany and Tim spent a pretty penny to maintain their style of dressing.

Best Figure And Physique

It's not unusual to find yourself wondering, "if only I had her figure or his physique." This is the response Ginger Smith and Joey Schulmeister often receive. With activities like weightlifting or cheer it's plain to see why Ginger and Joey have the best figure and physique.

Just one look at Jeff Harrell's folders or Jenny Mims' locker makes it easy to see how both were voted Most Unorganized. Amid the confusion of a barrage of scattered papers both Jeff and Jenny claim "to know exactly where everything is," but their title suggests otherwise.

Most School Spirit and Service

Because Kathy L'Italien devoted most of her time to being our student body president, and Stephen Hendrich being senior treasurer and an enthusiastic varsity cheerleader, they were recognized as having the most school spirit and service. Laith Haisha furiously rush to finish painting their parking space. The seniors were given only two Saturdays in October to complete their handiwork.

Andrea Robinson and Julie Pierce wander through the quad during lunch time. Their flashing smiles and winning personalities brightened everyone's day.

Seniors patiently wait for the parking lot auction to begin. This fundraiser brought in over $12,000 for the senior class.

Betty Boop adorns a students' parking space. Many of the 75 spaces sold that were painted brightened up the otherwise dreary senior lot.

Mr. Schimpf dons a pilot's hat as an indication of a "high-flyer" space during the parking lot auction. He frequently switched hats throughout the duration of the event.

Faculty

"Turn in your homework, you're late, it's the V.P. for you buddy." These are just a few phrases that students may think of when they here the word "faculty." Well, the Seal of Excellence is not only for students. Granite Hills has long had an excellent and caring faculty. The school year was filled with faculty involved events such as a "Beach Boys" lip sinc concert performed during the homecoming assembly by a few of our "hip" teachers. The faculty also showed their excellence by picking up trash, stressing such key words as "honest" or "self respect," and of coarse they did all that they could to help raise test scores by instilling excellence in the students.

Students often get the idea that teachers are some sort of seperate life forms, when in reality they are just people helping people. Throughout the yearbook, many of the student's school activities and weekend activities were shown. This section is dedicated to showing the faculty's excellence in every possible activity from baja bugs to hang-gliding. So remember the students aren't the only excellent ones; the faculty is "pretty darn impressive." Although some students may not like school, they would like it alot less if not for an outstanding faculty.

by Larry Morris

Faculty

Most Entertaining: Ms. Roisman and Mr. Zumwalt

Most School Spirit:

Best Dressed: Ms. McAdams and Mr. Bosworth

Favorites

Mr. Schimpf and Ms. Romanin

Best Figure and Physique: Ms. Drexler and Mr. Owens

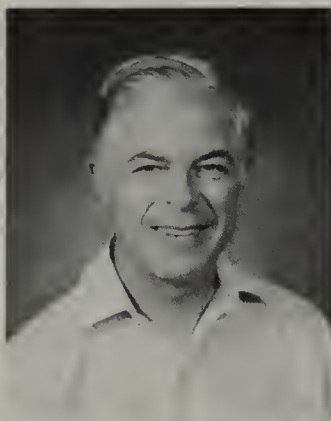

Throughout the past years, the Senior Standouts had become quite a tradition in our annual. Once again the yearbook staff decided to honor the faculty with their own standout page.

The "Faculty Favorites" give the faculty a chance to show off their individuality, and to be able to look back on the past with a bigger smile than ever! We the students would all like to give the faculty and staff a great salute for their unlimited dedication and their continuing encouragement!

Officially, Ms. Chris Boortz administers competency tests and provides tutoring for students. However, she does more than is necessary. Tutoring individuals, talking out students personal problems, and scheduling conflicts are a few of the extras Ms. Boortz attends to during the school day. She is satisfied with her job because although other jobs pay more, they lack the direct contact with students.

Ms. Roisman, an English teacher, is known to lighten the mood of her classroom with humor. She is often noted as her students' favorite teacher.

Ms. Joan Mayuiers is not only the Principal's Secretary, she is also the wife of Mel Mayuiers and the mother of three children that all graduated from Granite Hills. She loves to try daring tasks, such as parachuting, water skiing, and riding with her husband in their dune buggy. Two years ago, they took a third place with their dune buggy. She has been working at Granite Hills since 1969 and likes everything that her job has to offer. "I get the opportunity to work with many interesting students and staff members," commented Ms. Mayuiers. With her hard work and delightful attitude, she has proven to be a great help to our school and staff. She deserves to be recognized as one of our "excellent" staff members.

Matt Dawes is our Media Technician at Granite Hills. He has been working here for four years and has been one of the most helpful individuals on our staff. His job includes providing equipment for classes as well as technical assistance to teachers in the area of media. He is well known for his tremendous ability to make people laugh. His sense of humor and quick wit is quite unique. "It makes me feel good when I can help others," commented Mr. Dawes. His skills and dedication are a great help to our school.

Ricky

I'm so glad that I met you this year. You are real cool and funny. I hope that you have a fun summer. Maybe we can party together sometime this summer.
I will miss seeing you next year, and having you here (joke)
I will miss seeing you next year, though. We should go see you again next year. It would be well have a fun time. I hope you are a real cool friend.

Chris Rickards, been in town lately, been your friend to get the dinner to know me. Well
we have parties so many times just can't remember. From Cabo I remember the crazy times at Sam Onofre's. Also I'm always partying with Maguire
the future.
Stay this you

Jeff Provencher

WORLD EXCELLENCE PREVAILS

As another year has passed, the world has continued to change around us. The Reagan Contra Affair finally settled down as our space program was once again started on its way. The candidates running for the presidency all went full force while the Governor Mechem of Arizona was being impeached. Yet another national uprising was the Persian Gulf problem, along with a Russian ship charging one of the U.S. naval vessels. With all the hectic activities that have occurred, the word "excellence" may appear a word that was impossible to fulfill. But one event occurred that inspires excellence every four years. The 1988 Olympics brought together men of all nations, not fighting in wars, but competing in sports for the honor of the gold. Excellence was shown not only by the winners, but also everyone who gave their all. Another feat of excellence was the signing of a pact between the U.S.S.R. and the United States that eliminated short range missiles in Europe. This was one step towards bettering U.S.-U.S.S.R. relations and one more point to prove that even in our sometimes confusing world, excellence will always be a goal.

PRIDE INSPIRES EXCELLENCE

The 1987-88 school year was filled with a variety of events. The A.S.B. sponsored the first homecoming carnival. This turned out to be a major success as all the clubs joined together to make booths and games. The Senior Class also did its part to make the year memorable. They produced the Christmas Dance, the Prom and Grad Nite at Disneyland. Unfortunately, the Christmas Dance produced some unpleasant memories since the D.J. failed to show up! Despite the many problems, student still managed to have a great time.

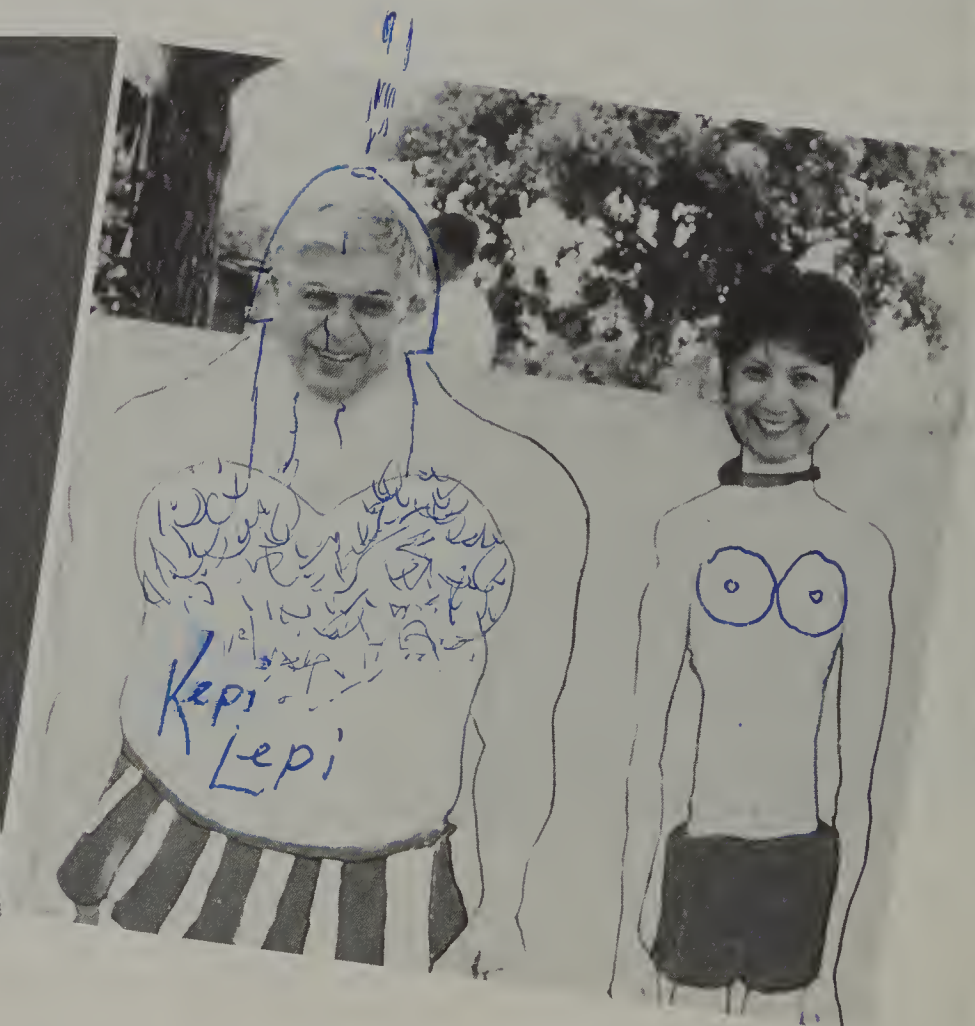

Sports had many highlights as the football, volleyball, cross country, boys and girls basketball, girls soccer and wrestling teams all made it to the C.I.F. playoffs. The entire school participated in sharing with their triumphs.

The teachers and staff all participated in improving the overall excellence in our school. They all helped to set an example for our school. In short, we had another fantastic year at Granite Hills High School.

This young man shows that not all freshman are abnormal — some are worse. He was one of the better sports.

Mr. Arens and Dr. Smith show that students aren't the only ones to have fun. They participated in the photo booth at the Homecoming Carnival.

A lonely sunset symbolized the hearts of many seniors at graduation. Graduation was the end of our high school career, but the beginning of an exciting life.

A FINAL GOODBYE

The time and effort it takes to create a yearbook is unbelievable. As editor-in-chief, I would like to thank a terrific staff and outstanding section editors. The pressures are always there, but all the section editors did a great job of pulling through. The section editors were: Karen Murray, Clubs; Jeff Harrell and Debbie Syktich, Sports; Jenny Mims and Dawn Johnson, Student Life; Debbie Syktich, Seniors; Luay Mansour, Freshman; Kristy Wiese, Sophomore and Juniors; Roxanne Parker, Faculty; and Dana Allison, Ads.

The '87-88 year was the first time ever that the yearbook began a Yearbook Hall of Fame. To the average student, this may sound strange but it takes literally hundreds of hours of hard work and determination to become a member. Two staffers were admitted to the Hall of Fame. I would like to give a very special thanks and congratulations to Debbie Syktich and Karen Murray. Karen was unsurpassed as an active, hardworking, self-starting and determined section editor. Although it was her first year on staff, she was still named Clubs Section Editor within the first two weeks on staff. Debbie was also a section editor on her first year as a rookie and again as a returning staffer. Her excellent effort, super spirit and willingness to work with others was great. She always had a smile and a kind word for everyone. Thanks to both of you.

The staff had many newcomers but one of them stood out. Ms. Barr, advisor, was also a new yearbook member. I'd like to give a super special congrats to Ms. Barr on a successful first year. Not many teachers allow students to become friends outside of school as well as in. Well, I'm happy to say Ms. Barr is my friend and a good one too. Thanks!

Many pressures go along with being a yearbook editor and I couldn't have survived without the help of three very special people. I would first of all like to say thanks to a very special person in my life, Karen Murray. I love ya Karen, and we have made a million great memories but a million more are to come. We've had trials and errors, but I feel it has only strengthened us both. Our friendship, love and trust will never stop growing. If ever you are in need, I am here as you have been for me. Good luck and I hope we're never separated. Thanks for everything. Next is Luay Mansour. Well, almost eleven years of friendship and only one disagreement. But hey, we'll always be friends. Thanks for the advice and friendship. And please, don't ride mopeds! Last but far from least is Greg (microbutt) Mercurio. Thirteen years as friends and I'll always resent the citizenship award you won in elementary school (psyche). You've been a great friend. Thanks and get a real car (Porsche 914).

Before I close, I want to give my deepest thanks to my mom and dad. Mom, you're absolutely the neatest person ever. The excellence I have attempted to show throughout the yearbook could not have been possible if not for the continuing excellence you've shown me. I thank you both so very much. I owe everything to you. I love you more than words can say.

Well, G.H.H.S., this is it, the end of the yearbook, and for many, the end of high school. I hope everyone loves the yearbook as much as I have loved helping design and edit it. We can't please everyone, but we, the staff, have done our best. Goodbyes are soooo sad, so I shall only say "Auf Wiedersehen" . . . "until we meet again". Let's go show the world that we all have a mark that truly is "THE SEAL OF EXCELLENCE."

Goodbye and God Bless You Always!

This book is dedicated to my wonderful Mother, Kay Morris (Kayree).

To explain why this photo is in our yearbook is a long story. But here are Sandra, Kay and Liz, my two sisters and my mother. I Love You All, and am very proud to have you as my mother and sisters. Thank you for all that you have done.

Rich,
Well I'm glad
I met you last year cuz we've had some good times!! I'm gonna miss you so much next year (but at least
you won't be here to beat me up every day!!)
I LOVE YA RICK
Keep in touch an don't forget (I'm sure I'll be seeing ya!)
Love ya

88,

with only a few more statements.
 2m life you must shoot for the stars; if you only land on the moon then you have gone far enough. Don't lose love life, then do not squander time, for that is what life is all about: 9m other words.
 Live life and enjoy sex, drugs and rock-n-roll. (Dana)

Ricky,
I'm glad we
finally had a class
together thanks for all the help delivering Call Slips & of course, all the rides home. I'm going to miss you next year, but I'm sure I'll see you at the beach. Have a great life.
Love

Rick,

Hey bud! I must say it's been quite an... EXPERIENCE being in ~~the~~ Mythology with you. Really, it was a lot of fun, and it wouldn't have been the same without you. I want you to know that I think you're a terrific guy + I hope you have a blast in whatever you do after high school. Don't have too much fun though! Thanks for making class so much more fun!

Love ya
Eugene

We must always remain loyal to our friends. I'm glad we shared my history. It gave me a chance to get to know you much of a party animal you really are. That night at Tom's house was crazy, but hey you have to meet party together before I become first on the weekend. This part of our life, HHS 54 school, is just the beginning of our long life until we reach the point of our life and second back down to the golden age of retirement. When we can sit back and enjoy a golden cylindrical encapsulating cold filtered malt and enjoy a golden cylindrical encapsulating cold filtered malt beverage. Well I've reached the end of my space so I leave you

Hey sweet-♥! Well, you

finally made it through your last year of high school. I'm gonna really miss you next year! It seems like we've been friends for so long even though it's really only been a year. I'm so glad that we are still such good friends after some of those really bad times. Thank for all your help with absences & with rehabilitation. I really need your help & I'm glad you are there to give it to me. I know our friendship will last forever. We've had so many good times that definitely out-do the bad ones. The Furs concert, the little green man, the X-mas dance '87, & those are just a few of the many great times we have had together. There better be more & & we'll have a great summer if you keep in touch. Well, I'll see ya soon, or in Mex. & this summer '88. And remember
